

FRENCH ATTACK FORCING GERMANS TO RUSH UP THOUSANDS OF TROOPS

Three More British Ships Torpedoed, Sunk; U. S. Food Prices Up 10-25 Per Cent in Week

HOUSEWIVES IN PROTESTS TO OFFICIALS

Wholesalers Declare There Is No Reason for Rise, Place Blame on Sudden Rush to Buy.

NEW YORK, Sept. 7.—(AP)—The European war hit the American family dinner table, a national survey today disclosed.

Throughout the nation, retail staple food prices soared. Sugar, flour, lard, butter, meats jumped, mostly about 10 to 25 per cent over last week, sometimes much higher.

Rationing of supplies to housewives by retail grocers was common practice in many cities. Some cities reported a sudden, temporary shortage of basic staples.

Housewives Complain.
The housewives complained to officials—in New York Mayor La Guardia received 5,000 individual complaints in two days. Many city, state and national officials ordered investigations to check profiteering. But wholesale grocery men blamed housewives themselves.

Week end war news sent them scurrying to put away emergency supplies of storable food, it was said, and the sudden rush precipitated local shortages.

Many national, state and city officials, and wholesale food dealers said there was no reason now for a general price rise. There are ample supplies of food of all sorts, they said, plenty for all demands and more.

Sugar Surplus.
Chiefly in the case of sugar, some said, there appeared to be definite underlying reasons for a price increase. In sugar trade circles, it has been reported for some days that refiners were holding off offerings. Some wholesalers said they were informed only after receiving new orders that the price had been substantially raised.

In Washington, Dr. Joshua Bernhardt, chief of the sugar section of the Department of Agriculture, said the nation actually has a surplus of sugar and that it was possible a "synthetic" shortage was being created. He said the department might raise marketing quotas if processors and refiners persisted in holding supplies off the market.

PEACE, FLOWERS ON WESTERN FRONT ---SO SAY GERMANS

BERLIN, Sept. 7.—(AP)—They're saying it with flowers, children's toy balloons, leaflets and even with personal visits along the Alsatian-German front, according to German reports which reached the capital tonight.

According to these reports: 1. Both German and French soldiers decorated their bunkers in the Siegfried and Maginot lines with flowers while awaiting orders from their respective governments to open fire.

2. Occasionally toy balloons are carried from one side of the "enemy" line to the other with friendly greetings.

3. At certain hours visits are exchanged.

4. This morning French and German privates even bathed together in the Rhine river.

Nazi military experts said troops presently stationed in fortifications of the Maginot and Siegfried lines would have to be withdrawn in case warlike operations really are begun. As one prominent Nazi put it, "You can't expect Frenchmen to shoot down and kill the German opposite him when just an hour ago the two played cards together."

(So far there has been no report in Berlin of fighting on the western front with France.)

SAVANT PREDICTS REVOLT IN REICH

Dr. Loemker, of Emory, Returns From Berlin; Sees Hitler's Overthrow.

By BETTY MATHIS.
A revolution throughout Germany will eventually overthrow Hitler and it will be accentuated by military defeats, it was predicted by Dr. Leroy E. Loemker, Emory University professor, last night upon his return from six months in Berlin, where he studied under a Rosenwald fellowship. "There is much opposition to Hitler among the German people," Dr. Loemker declared last night. "I feel sure that a few military reverses would bring immediate revolt against the man who has led the Germans into a war for which they felt there was no necessity."

The Germans had no enthusiasm for war of any kind and they felt

3 VESSELS ATTACKED BUT ESCAPE

Manaar, Olivegrove, Royal Sceptre Go Down; 46 Rescued, 2 Dead and 40 Reported Missing.

By The Associated Press.

German submarine warfare, which almost won the World War for Kaiser Wilhelm, became an important element of the new European conflict last night as at least four more Allied ships were attacked in the Atlantic by the universally feared U-boats.

Two of these, the British freighters Manaar and Olivegrove, were reported sunk. No immediate word was received of the fate of the others, the British Pukkastan and French Tamara, also freighters.

The U. S. liner American Farmer advised Radiomarine last night that the British ship Pukkastan and the French ship Tamara were attacked in the Atlantic by submarines.

Position Given.

The position of the Pukkastan was given as 4923 north 7.49 west, the Tamara as 4221 north 1201 west.

The British ship thus was somewhere off the south coast of Ireland, the French off the northwest coast of Spain, near the Bay of Biscay.

Still another freighter, the Cunard Royal Sceptre, was added to the roll of victims by the British Ministry of Information, which announced also that the Corinthic had been attacked, but reached port safely.

Two Sank Earlier.

Previously listed were the Donaldson (British) liner Athenia—Berlin has denied she was torpedoed—and the freighter Bosnia. The total loss of life to date was undetermined, but the Donaldson Line reported about 128 passengers and crew members of the 1,400-odd aboard the Athenia still were missing. One member of the Bosnia crew was killed.

The destruction of the 7,242-ton British steamer Manaar was described tonight by survivors brought to Lisbon. They said a submarine first torpedoed the Manaar and then opened fire as the crew of 88 sought to leave the sinking ship.

Forty-six of the crew—three of them wounded—had been rescued.

"Arrival back of lines of Polish prisoners of war"—thus, in terse language did the German censors caption this picture radioed from Berlin to New York. The German high command yesterday reported that its troops had captured 25,000 Polish soldiers in seven days.

CONGRESS CHIEFS ASKED ABOUT CALL

McNary Says President Suggested September 18 for Opening Session.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 7.—(AP)—President Roosevelt has been sounding out congressional leaders on both parties on the possibility of calling congress into special session to revamp the neutrality act, but the White House said today that no decision had been reached. Stephen Early, presidential secretary, said his chief "has not decided the date of the call, the date of convening, or whether he will call congress back."

Early summoned newspapermen to his office to make this statement after Senator McNary, of Oregon, the Republican leader, had said at Salem, Ore., that he had received a telephone call from the chief executive suggesting that congress meet September 18, discuss neutrality only, and adjourn as quickly as possible. With all of this, McNary agreed.

This development came toward the close of a day which found the President studying advancing prices of certain foodstuffs and goods, enlarging his cabinet for the

Windsors To Return Home For Special 'Duty' Today

Secrecy Surrounds Time of Departure of Duke and His Duchess; They May Go Home Aboard Gunboat, Ending Three Years of Exile.

CANNES, France, Sept. 7.—(AP)—The Duke of Windsor and his American-born duchess, for whose love he abdicated the British throne, will return to England tomorrow, a spokesman announced today.

It was reported an important special "duty" awaited the former monarch who has not seen his homeland in almost three years of self-imposed exile. The nature of the task to be given the duke in Britain's war-time government was not disclosed.

Secrecy surrounded the time of departure and the route. (An Associated Press dispatch to Washington from southern France reported that the duke and duchess might leave late today by automobile to embark aboard a British gunboat. A special emissary from London arrived by airplane and conferred with the duke.)

The duke, anxious to get back home now that his country is at war again with Germany, originally planned to fly to England last Saturday but adverse weather held up the private plane they had summoned.

Windsor left England December

Opinions of Atlantans Differ On French, English Tactics

People in Atlanta have a wide divergence of opinion about the military strategy being played by England and France.

In a poll taken yesterday by The Constitution, men, as a rule, were a little suspicious of the tactics used by England and France in their efforts to assist Poland.

Among the women there was a general feeling that both England and France are doing their best, and that government censorship on news only makes it appear that their military operations are not vigorous.

Here is what the women think: Mrs. Marion Patterson Jr., office clerk and housewife: "The war is just starting. Our news is probably censored, for it would be foolish to tell the world about important military operations. "They are doing all they can do. It would be foolish for them not to exert every effort now that they are in it. They are just keeping part of it quiet."

Mrs. M. T. McClellan, a housewife: "It is terrible that they got in at all, but that they are involved they will do their best to stop Hitler."

Mrs. Leora Laing, food demonstrator: "The British should drop bombs rather than propaganda leaflets. After all, this is a war. This must be a war to the finish. The Allies won't be whipped, so why not get it over with?" Mrs. Elizabeth Clegg, secretary: Continued in Page 12, Column 5.

SELF GOVERNMENT OF CHILDREN URGED

Cultural Education Needed
Today, Wells Says on 'Forward Georgia' Program.

Cultural education that provides students with a chance to govern themselves is needed today, President Guy H. Wells, of the Georgia State College for Women, said last night, speaking on the board of regents' "Forward Georgia" program.

"The standards of civilization are set by the men and women who understand the history and culture of the past represented by the arts and humanities," he declared.

"Students have to be taught to be self-disciplined and responsible. College students are grown. If democracy is to survive, educators must see that the schools are democratic and that the children of our land are brought up in a democratic atmosphere."

TWO GERMANS PLAN APPEAL IN SPY CASE

Convicted in Canal Zone for Illegal Photography; Hearing Set in Atlanta.

Appeal from a two-year sentence imposed in the Canal Zone district court upon two German residents charged with illegally photographing a fortified area will be heard before the fifth district federal circuit court of appeals when it convenes here on October 2.

The defendants, Hans Heinrich Schackow and Ernest Robert Edward Kuehrig, arrested October 16, 1938, for taking photographs near Fort Randolph were convicted before District Judge Bunk Gardner in the Canal Zone. They, with two others who are awaiting trial, were charged specifically with unlawfully obtaining information affecting national defense.

Last March the circuit court overruled government motions to dismiss the appeals on technical grounds.

Resentment Against Nazis and War Exists in Germany, Visitor Says

John D. Idol Reports Dissatisfaction Most Prevalent in Munich Area.

Resentment against the German government and the war exists in Germany, in the opinion of John D. Idol, High Point (N. C.) furniture manufacturer, who yesterday was in Atlanta.

Idol has just returned from a month's stay in Germany, having reached New York on the last trip of the Normandie.

"I found plenty of people in and near Munich who would speak of their dissatisfaction," said Idol, who had German friends who put him in contact with persons to whom he talked. "These persons were not Jews or those who had been persecuted but were normal residents of the section. I found this rather frequently in south Germany. In north Germany I did not find it. There the attitude seemed unanimously for Hitler in so far as one could ascertain by contacts with ordinary people."

"Vienna," he said, "is a pitiful city. Once so alive and gay, it now is a dead city. Nothing goes on. There is a quiet tenseness which one finds in all countries where there are state police in charge of the nation. Vienna is a shell."

"In Prague, of course, there was much outspoken opposition. The Germans seemed to have been so busy taking over the industrial and financial operations of Czechoslovakia they have not had time to suppress the people with the terror of the police as they have in Austria. The feeling in the recently acquired sections is not, of course, anything like that in Germany proper. They naturally have more to resent."

JURY WILL BE ASKED TO CONTINUE PROBE

Predecessors To Urge Study of Fulton Purchases, Relief Situation.

Requests that the new grand jury investigate the relief situation and the county's system of purchases as well as county affairs generally are expected to be laid before it today by a committee from the July-August grand jury.

Thomas C. Law, foreman of the last jury, and several members of that group are scheduled to appear before the September-October jury this morning to give the new jurors the benefit of their findings which were not made public in the last presentations.

W. C. Wardlaw Jr., foreman of the new jury, said his group will not know what its program of investigation will be until after the conference with the committee and discussion among the members.

This grand jury has been charged by Judge E. E. Pomeroy with the duty of investigating affairs of Fulton county generally, but the last jury voted to ask the incoming body to take up relief and purchases with special attention, since it had begun such investigations but was unable to complete them due to other heavy duties.

FOOD PRICES JUMP 10 TO 25 PER CENT

Domestic and Puerto Rican producers, he said, had on hand 800,000 tons of sugar in excess of marketing quotas which may be placed on the market.

There apparently were no general increases in the prices of shoes and clothing in the nation, despite the rising hide and wool prices. It was pointed out that most autumn buying by retailers was done before the rise, and that subsequent retail price increases might not be necessary until after Christmas, normally a time for bargain sales.

In Chicago, heads of Sears, Roebuck & Co. and Montgomery Ward & Co. said their prices would not be generally higher until new catalogs come out after the first of the year.

Some Wall Street financial leaders, greatly preoccupied these days with the whole subject of future prices, said they understood President Roosevelt was seriously considering various proposals to put a ceiling on prices to prevent inflation and "profiteering."

Department stores generally resisted price increases. As a group, they have been preaching the gospel that a rush to buy to avoid higher prices will in itself bring higher prices.

ALABAMA ATTACKS PROFITEERING

A Crown Roast of Short Ribs Looks Good

This crown roast of beef short ribs will add grace to any table. It may be stuffed with a bread or potato filling. The smaller photo shows how the ribs are cut and placed to form the "crown."

Fine Flavor of Beef Short Ribs Makes Them a Distinctive Dish

They Provide Substantial Food, Yet Are Light on the Family Market Budget of Those Seeking Value for a Reasonable Price.

By SALLY SAVER.

Short ribs of beef are one of the flavorful economy cuts. Short ribs with browned potatoes or short ribs with vegetables are on the menu when substantial food is called for and yet the budget cannot carry a heavy load at the moment. But whoever thought of a standing rib roast formed of beef short ribs stuffed to resemble the patrician crown roast of lamb?

But here it is and a very distinctive and appetizing dish it makes too. Beef short ribs have a fine flavor, due to the bone and fat which is freely interspersed with the meat, but it is one of the cuts which requires slow, moist cooking to bring out its best. This crown of short ribs is to be cooked just as you would cook a pot roast.

Cooking the Crown Short Rib. Buy short ribs in two strips (as seen in smaller photograph). Sew or skewer the ends together and season. Place the ribs end down on a rack in the roasting pan. Fill center with dressing and roast uncovered in a slow oven, 300 degrees for one hour. Add a little water, cover and continue cooking one and one-half hours or until tender. Your favorite bread dressing may be used as a filling or you may like to try this unusual potato dressing.

Potato Dressing.
4 slices bacon
1 tablespoon chopped onion
1 teaspoon chopped parsley
1-8 teaspoon ginger
1-4 teaspoon poultry seasoning

From Sally Saver's Notebook

Graham cracker muffins are delicious and so easy that a child can make them. Here's how:

18 graham crackers
2 tablespoons sugar
1-4 teaspoon salt
1 tablespoon flour
3 teaspoons baking powder
1-2 cup seeded raisins
3 tablespoons melted butter
1 egg, beaten
1-2 cup milk, heated to lukewarm.

Crumble crackers fine, add sugar, salt, flour and baking powder. Blend thoroughly, cut raisins in halves and stir into dry ingredients; add melted butter. Pour warm milk over cracker mixture, add beaten egg. Mix lightly and fill hot, greased muffin pans two-thirds full of mixture. Bake in a moderately hot oven, 400 degrees, about 20 minutes. Yield, 12 small muffins.

Melon Balls in Grape Juice. Shape melon, honeydew or other, into small balls with a vegetable cutter or spoon and let them float in chilled grape juice for at least 30 minutes. At serving time arrange them in cold sherbet glasses and sprinkle with finely chopped mint.

Crumbed Carrots. Use small, whole boiled carrots. Dip each in salad oil, melted margarine, cream or evaporated milk, season with salt and a little white pepper. Have a dish of finely crushed cornflakes ready and into this drop the carrots, rolling them around until completely covered with the crumbs. Place in a shallow pan and bake in a hot oven for 10 minutes or until browned. Stick a sprig of parsley in the top of each carrot and serve them hot.

Fresh Corn Chowder. Begin a cold-plate meal with a bowl of soup. Corn chowder is a good choice. Here's how to make it:

2 slices fat, salt pork
1 onion
2 cups potatoes, cut in half-inch cubes
3-4 cups boiling water
2 cups freshly cut or canned corn
1 teaspoon salt
1-8 teaspoon pepper
1-4 cups evaporated milk
1 tablespoon butter or margarine
1 tablespoon flour
Crackers
Cut salt pork into small pieces and fry slowly in soup kettle. Add sliced onion and cook five minutes. Add cubed potatoes and boiling water. Simmer slowly until potatoes are soft. Add corn and seasonings. Add milk. Melt butter or margarine, add flour and blend well. Add gradually to soup mixture, stirring until slightly thick-

1-8 teaspoon pepper.
1 quart bread crumbs
1 egg
2 cups mashed potatoes
Water.
Dice bacon and brown. Add onions and cook slowly until tender. Add seasonings. Combine bacon mixture with cubed bread, then add slightly beaten egg and mashed potatoes. Toss together until evenly combined. Add water until mixture is of the desired moisture. Fill center of crown roast of beef short ribs.

AMERICANS ENLIST IN BRITAIN'S ARMY

Canadians, Also Fighting Mad Over Athenia Sinking, Join Forces.

By THOMAS R. HENRY.

For The North American Newspaper Alliance.

LONDON, Sept. 7.—(By Wire)—Both Americans and Canadians are enlisting in the British army, largely from burning indignation over the sinking of the Athenia.

The American response seems as yet a bare trickle, but a small army of stranded school teachers and college girls is conspicuous for the eagerness of its members to help out on all jobs that women can do here while so many men are in camp.

The Canadian response has been explosive. For three days the office of Vincent Massey, the Dominion high commissioner, in Trafalgar square, has been besieged by men seeking to enlist and women volunteering to fill sand bags, cook in hospitals and camps, and wash dishes and milk cows on farms.

1,200 Registered.

For the present, their names and addresses are being recorded. Up to date 1,200 Canadians have registered for military service. How many have enlisted directly without consulting Canada House is unknown. The number of Canadians in Great Britain is nebulous. During all of last year 12,000 registered with the commissioner. Several thousand others neglected to do so, it is believed. Probably half of the total were summer visitors.

A constant liaison is maintained by the Canadian officials with the war office. All names are sent to the war office as soon as received. While some of the 1,200 volunteers are Canadians permanently resident in London, officials at Canada House believe many of them are college boys who started on summer tours of Europe and were marooned here when the shocking news of the Athenia sinking reached them fighting mad.

Few Eligible Americans. While indignation is running just as high among the Americans here, little information about enlistments can be obtained. There are about 8,000 Americans now in Great Britain, it is estimated by the American embassy. About 6,000 are in the London area, but embassy officials say that nearly half of them are permanent residents. Of the rest, more than half are women, while many of the men are above military age.

Embassy officials, mindful of American neutrality, have been loath to offer any advice. Nearly all the American men who are permanent residents in London were said to be middle-aged, as a result of rigid British labor restrictions in recent years that have prevented American firms from sending young men to their offices and plants here. When the women and older men among the stranded tourists are eliminated, there are very few left who might volunteer.

London's newest shoes are lined with elastic.

U. S. TO GO AHEAD WITH ENGLAND ON COTTON BARTER

Britain Will Get 600,000 Bales in Exchange for Rubber, the Department of State Announces.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 7.—(AP)—The United States will go through with its agreement with Great Britain for the exchange of 600,000 bales of cotton for 175,000,000 pounds of British rubber.

The State Department announced tonight that President Roosevelt issued yesterday a proclamation of the agreement between the two countries for the exchange of cotton and rubber signed at London June 23, 1939.

Point number 4 of that agreement permits Great Britain, because of the advent of war, to make immediate use of the cotton, which otherwise was to have been stored up as a war reserve.

Government control measures are restraining business in Japan.

War's Effect on New York Is Found In Behind-the-Scenes Precautions

City's 18,000 Police Are on Emergency Duty, G-Men Are on Alert for Espionage and Sabotage; Power Plants, Reservoirs Closely Guarded.

By GLADWIN HILL.

NEW YORK, Sept. 7.—(AP)—The war is profoundly affecting life in the nation's largest city, but not to the eye of the tourist on Fifth avenue. It's all behind the scenes.

New York's 18,000 police stroll about untroubled, but they're on emergency duty—only one day off in 27.

Among the crowds are a secret squadron of 100 G-men, on the alert for new espionage, sabotage, and a dozen other war-time dangers.

In a hundred places, there are special guards.

City police, in co-operation with state police, guard the several vital reservoirs of the city's huge water supply against sabotage.

Other officers are stationed at all the important power plants. There are new special 24-hour patrols on the dozen big bridges and tunnels that are such important arteries between Manhattan and Long Island and New Jersey—where, in the last war, occurred the Black Tom and Kingsland ammunition explosions, the incidents for which have not been settled yet.

At the Brooklyn Navy Yard, where work is being rushed on several new cruisers and destroyers, there are more special protective measures.

Other centers of activity under guard are the foreign consulates, where daily lines of various nationalities register, seek war information and volunteer for military service.

At the World's Fair, several foreign buildings are shut down, others have been stripped of their foreign staffs by conscription. All are guarded.

Paradoxically, in Yorkville, the center of New York's 600,000 Germans, quiet prevails. The only notable new phenomenon is the newsdealer, who once would have been run out of the district, capitalizing on the Russian-German trade treaty by selling copies of the Communist Daily Worker.

In the Polish section, hidden away in the lower East Side, the streets are full of war gossip. The Poles excitedly scan the foreign-newspaper bulletin boards.

Radio Towers Guarded. Far out on Long Island a forest of wireless towers, one of the United States' most important channels of communication with Europe, have been suddenly highlighted as a vital spot.

A few days ago, nobody thought anything about them. Now, the downtown employees of RCA, MacKay Radio and the telephone company hesitate even to mention the stations' locations.

Today there were new fences around the towers, all gates were locked, and visitors carefully examined.

Over the last week end, the Columbia Broadcasting System distributed pictures of its new short-wave receiving station—labeled only "somewhere on Long Island."

The National Broadcasting Company's short-wave receiving station is in the heart of Manhattan, only a few feet from a spot visited by thousands of tourists daily, but even the building employees don't know where the apparatus is.

The vigilance on all fronts around New York has reached the point where a New York policeman the other day—to his subsequent chagrin—reported sighting a submarine in a Long Island creek.

PETERSON ADVISES 'STAY OUT OF WAR'

Congressman Says Home Program Big Enough to Keep U. S. Occupied.

The war is a European row and none of America's business, Congressman Hugh Peterson, of Ailey, said here yesterday.

Peterson said he thought the United States had enough trouble at home without attempting to pull Europe's chestnuts out of the fire and getting burned again.

"If we could give Europe ten billion dollars for building war machines to threaten the peace and safety of our civilization, which is exactly what we have done since the World War, then it seems to me that we should devote our thoughts to the matter of giving at least a small portion of that sum to rehabilitate our own people so they may have an opportunity to earn for themselves the necessities of life without too much governmental control," he announced.

"This is our most vital problem, and should be settled before we again attempt to settle the problems of Europe."

3 BRITISH SHIPS TORPEDOED, SUNK

At least two were dead. Forty were missing.

Meanwhile, the U. S. liner Washington wireless Radiomarine in New York yesterday that the Glasgow freighter Olivegrove had been torpedoed some 200 miles northwest of Spain.

Nazi Captain Courteous. A "most courteous" German submarine commander "greatly helped" 33 seamen before sinking their British freighter Olivegrove, Captain Giles Stedman, of the U. S. liner Washington wireless told tonight after rescuing the men.

Stedman said the submarine ordered "all hands to abandon ship" and "when the boats were in water and clear of ship a torpedo was fired into the Olivegrove."

The sub commander was most courteous in treatment of survivors, furnishing them a course and check of their compasses," Captain Stedman said.

He said the sub first offered to tow the lifeboats of the Olivegrove, a 4,060-ton craft bound from Puerto de Padre, Cuba, with a cargo of sugar for England.

No Lives Lost. Captain Stedman's message indicated no lives were lost.

The sub fired two red rockets which enabled the Washington to sight the lifeboats in the Atlantic off the coast of Ireland and near the entrance to the English Channel, Captain Stedman said.

"The sub carried no identification marks," he said.

Captain Stedman said all survivors were in good condition.

The Olivegrove sank six minutes after the torpedo struck, settling down by the stern.

The Washington, bound from New York for England, was less than an hour's run northwest of the Olivegrove when the SOS was received.

Proceeded at Full Speed. "Reports from other vessels told us we were closer so we proceeded at full speed, sighting two lifeboats at 20:23 (2:23 p. m. EST)," Stedman said.

The survivors were picked up at 3:11 p. m., 48 minutes after the Washington sighted the submarine's rockets.

The Olivegrove is owned by the Grove line of Glasgow. It was built in 1929 and had been active in freighting sugar to England. She had a length of 375 feet.

She was the fifth English ship known to have been destroyed since England declared "a state of war" five days ago.

Even before yesterday's rapid-fire developments, British Prime Minister Chamberlain reported to the house of commons that "three or four" British ships besides the Athenia had been sunk by submarines and declared the "development of German U-boat attacks on our shipping" was the "most important feature" of naval activity.

Of the Athenia, which went down 200 miles off the Hebrides Sunday night, Chamberlain said, "no denials or inventions on the part of Germany will convince the public of German innocence of this crime."

A would-be submarine attack on the Dutch ship carrying Sir Neville Henderson, British ambassador to Berlin, and his staff across the English channel was indicated by the official statement that destroyers accompanying the ship dropped depth bombs during the voyage.

One passenger said that two destroyers first turned about and then he heard three loud explosions. A half-hour later, he said, there were two explosions after the destroyers had turned back.

Ships Attack Nazi Subs. The ministry information announced British naval attacks on German submarines had continued and that "in at least one case success appears probable."

Chamberlain assured commons that anti-submarine craft had been active and that steps were being taken to establish a convoy system at the earliest possible moment.

On the surface, British naval craft apparently were more successful. Three German freighters—the Carl Fritzen, Olinda and motorship Inn—were listed as having been sunk and the information minister said German merchantmen were "being steadily driven from the seas."

54 Ships Take Refuge. Fifty-four German ships have taken refuge in the neutral port of Vigo, Spain, the ministry said.

Victory for Allies Predicted By French Officer in Atlanta

Emory Professor Expects Call to Colors at Any Hour.

Ultimate victory for the Allies in the second world war was confidently predicted yesterday by 29-year-old Roger Harlepp, a first lieutenant in the French army reserves and former professor at Emory University, who expects at any minute to be called to fight for his country.

The young officer has reasons to back up his optimistic views. He was born at Belfort, France, only a few miles from the Siegfried Line. He knows the territory where the war is now raging along the western front. He was schooled in some of the strictest military institutions in France, served as an electrical engineer on the Maginot Line, and keeps a watchful eye on the military moves of the French army by means of the newspapers.

To Circle Siegfried Line. French military strategy, he thinks, will be to crash through the northern and southern ends of the Siegfried Line, the weakest points. Once through the line he believes the army will then occupy the rich coal fields and industrial areas of Germany, cutting that country off from needed supplies. It then will be necessary for Hitler to withdraw from Poland and concentrate on the western front.

As to how long it will take the French soldiers to batter their way through the Siegfried Line Harlepp will not hazard a guess. The fact that the Siegfried Line was constructed so quickly, requiring only two years for completion as compared with six years for the Maginot Line, will prove a weakening factor, he says.

Even with the help of Russia, Harlepp does not believe Hitler could win the war. If the Poles can hold out until the French get into Germany territory he believes they can repulse the invader.

Expected Long War. Harlepp, like many others, thinks Hitler would like to make it a short war, but does not believe it will be so. Should the Germans get Poland, the British and French will not be ready to quit, and Hitler will then have to turn to the western front, he declares. The letters he gets from home disprove the supposition that the fighting will be of short duration, the officer pointed out.

A weak point in the German war machine, Harlepp said, is the lack of trained officers. The French have a distinct advantage in this respect, he added. He went into considerable detail as to how thoroughly France concentrates on adequate training, citing his military experience as an example.

Ninety-five per cent of the French officers have college degrees, he said. They are sent through a rigorous routine of training. And of the hundreds who enlist only a small per cent—the most competent—pass the strict examinations and emerge as commissioned officers.

Allies Expected Soviet Pact. Harlepp takes the pact between Germany and Russia lightly. Even if France and Great Britain had acted more quickly, the results would have been the same. They rather expected to be cheated by the Russians, he said.

Arrival of winter and the rainy season will have a decided effect on the fighting in Poland, he said. It will be an advantage to the Poles. But it will bring little change in the ferocity of hostilities along the western front.

Harlepp and his wife live at 746 Boulevard, N.E. When friends call he frankly tells them he may and nine others were in Japanese ports.

The whereabouts of the $20,000,000 liner Bremen, pride of the German merchant fleet, remained a mystery. Berlin sources have said she reached a neutral port unharmed after sailing from New York eight days ago and it was rumored in Berlin yesterday that she was at the Russian port of Murmansk.

The German undersea warfare was off to a far faster start than in the World War. That conflict started in August and it was not until Sept. 5 that a sub casualty was recorded—the British naval vessel Pathfinder.

Not until 1915 did the deadly U-boat torpedoes become a threat to allied shipping; thereafter they became so destructive that they came close to shutting off British-French food and war supplies. In the four years of the war, German submarines sank more than 5,000 ships with a tonnage of more than 11,000,000.

TO ENLARGE PLANT. WEST POINT, Ga., Sept. 7.—Ground has been broken for a three-story addition to the Lanett Bleachery and Dye Works, which, when completed, will give 30,000 more square feet of floor space to the textile manufacturing plant. Work on the new building will be completed about January 1.

When he was the Prince of Wales, has become restive in recent months at his inactivity.

"I am now a very happily married man, but my wife and I are neither content nor willing to live a purely inactive life," he confided.

In the last year he made two appeals for peace.

In a broadcast to the United States from Verdun on May 5 he called upon "all political leaders" to rise above "purely national interests" in order to avoid war. That appeal was said to have had the approval of his brother, King George VI.

More recently he appealed to King Vittorio Emanuele of Italy "as a simple citizen of the world" to bring his influence to bear in the cause of peace.

DEALERS ARE TOLD OF DODGE CHANGES

1940 Models 'Will Sound Fresh Note in Styling,' Official Says.

Three hundred Dodge dealers and service men of Georgia and Tennessee meeting here yesterday heard J. W. Hutchins, assistant general sales manager of the corporation, describe the new improvements of the 1940 model which will soon be put on the market.

Chick Bamford, service manager for the Dodge division of Chrysler motors, demonstrated to the dealers how used models of Dodge cars could be streamlined into 1940 style.

Speaking to the dealers, Hutchins said, "Our 1940 cars will be very new and will sound an entirely fresh note in styling in both exterior and interior line and appointment, and will incorporate numerous mechanical and other features that will make for greater comfort, smoother and more efficient performance, convenience, greater safety and economy."

The new model will feature a "full-floating ride" by offering a car with front and rear seats well between the front and rear axles, Hutchins said.

While the new cars were shown the dealers, no announcement of their mechanical changes were made for publication. No body style will be made from a 1939 die, he said.

In one day $100,000 was raised in England for the Submarine Disaster Fund.

MAN FOUND DEAD OF PISTOL WOUNDS IN ALLEY BATTLE

Decatur Street. Lunch Stand Owner Killed Behind Restaurant; Police Arrest Two Men.

James D. Edwards, 65, was shot five times and killed last night in a gun battle with a negro at his lunch stand at 298 Decatur street.

Witnesses said a negro, who had argued with Edwards earlier in the evening over the purchase of a soft drink, went to the rear of the store and began throwing rocks. Edwards took a pistol and fired half a dozen times at the assailant.

Reloading his gun, the restaurant proprietor went through the back door and several minutes later another volley was heard. At 8:15 o'clock he was found lying in the alley near 298 Decatur street.

Was In Restaurant.
H. Mackey, of Riverside, Ga., who was in the restaurant at the time of the argument, gave police a description of the negro. He said he did not overhear the nature of the argument.

H. L. Leach, of Pine Lake, also in the store, described the stoning in the rear of the establishment in which Edwards lived.

Both men said they thought nothing of the second volley of shots and didn't investigate, believing Edwards was doing the shooting.

Edwards was shot with a .32 revolver, twice in the right leg, once in the left leg, and twice in the back. He was pronounced dead at Grady hospital.

Carried Large Sums.
City Detectives H. A. Preston and P. B. Greene, assigned to the case, pointed out that Edwards was known to carry large sums of money and gave robbery as a possible motive. However, $45 in Edwards' desk was untouched.

Police are holding for investigation Adam Dennis, 35, negro, and Willis H. Jackson, 24, negro, both of the rear of 298 Decatur street. Upon questioning they could add nothing to the testimony given by the white men.

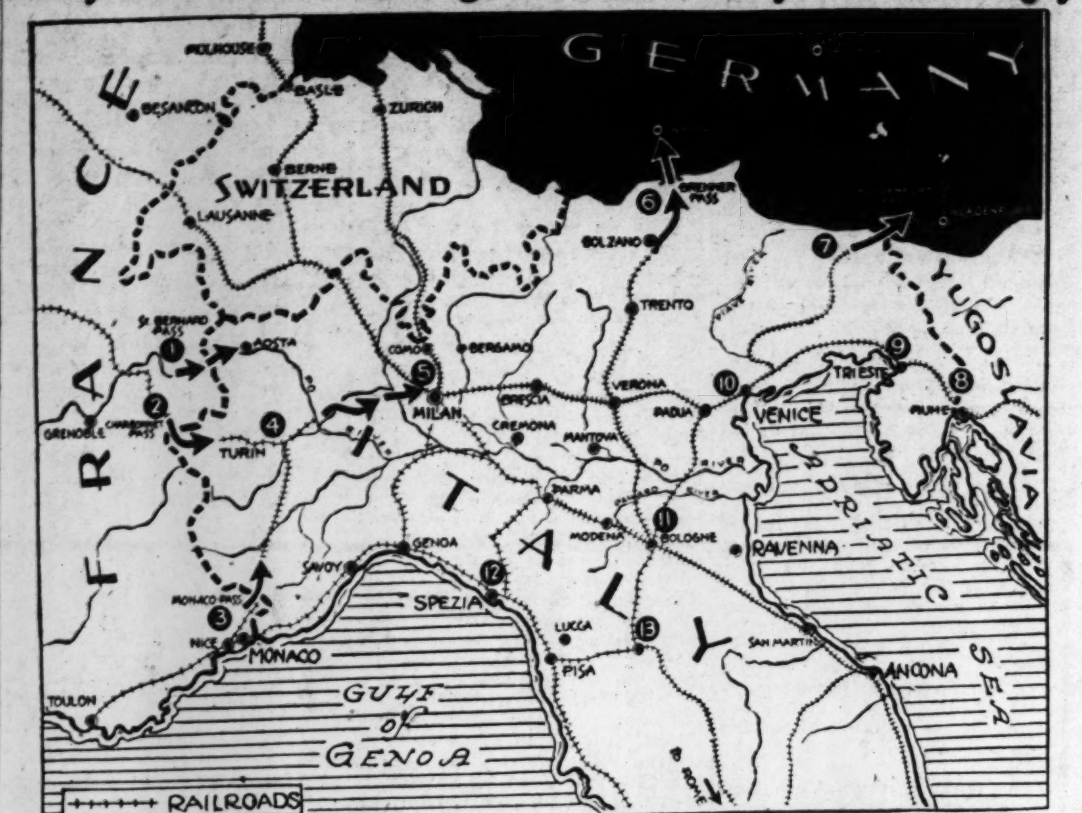

Edwards' body was taken to the funeral parlors of Henry M. Blanchard. Arrangements will be announced later.

Easy Backdoor Passage to Germany Lies in Italy

As France and Germany battled on the western front, observers turned their attention to Italy, back door to Germany. Italy has promised to remain neutral, but France is reported exerting pressure to obtain passage through the country. Three mountain passes (1) St. Bernard, (2) Charbonnet and (3) Monaco converge on Turin (4), important Italian manufacturing city, and thence on Milan, (5). From Milan railroads give easy access to the Brenner Pass (6) and Klagenfurt Pass (7) into Germany. Fiume (8), Trieste (9) and Venice (10), Adriatic ports which provide a stream of supplies into blockaded Germany, also are closely linked to Milan by rail. Bologna (11) is a main stop if an invader turned south from Milan toward Florence (12) and Rome. Italy's naval base at Spezia (13) also is vulnerable to attack from the northern passes.

not more than a dozen Americans among the victims.

CANNES—Duke and Duchess of Windsor to leave today for London, ending almost three years of exile for former monarch.

MOSCOW—Russia's policy of "neutrality from capitalistic warmongers" praised at meetings throughout Soviet.

By The Associated Press.
A spread in the fighting on the western front was indicated last night by French reports of repeated successes and German reinforcements to stop the advance by the French armies into the strategically-situated German forest of Bienwald, just north of Lauterbourg.

Dispatches from Basel, Switzerland, told of heavy artillery hammering at the Siegfried line. A French communiqué said thousands of Nazi reinforcements were pouring into the line to meet the French advances into the fringe of Germany's rich Saar district.

French Troops in Line.
While the big guns boomed, hundreds of thousands of French troops moved under protection of the Maginot line into position, ready to strike at the points the high command decides is the weakest.

A French communiqué last night reported heavy German troop concentrations in the Moselle valley. The French movements in the Saar region, however, were confined for the time being to local action, reports received here said.

The French were said to have taken more pillboxes in German territory before the main positions of the Siegfried line.

Heavily Fortified.
The Moselle valley between the principality of Luxembourg and the Saar, is one of the two most heavily fortified regions of both the Maginot and Siegfried lines.

Great French forts guard both sides of the Moselle near Sierck, while the Germans guard the Moselle and Rhine valley routes to Cologne.

Military observers in Switzerland doubted that the French would risk a head-on assault in that stronghold.

Coal Fields May Fall.
These observers said, however, the Saarland coal fields might fall, at least partially, into French possession with but little resistance.

German comment on this possibility was that "Louis Napoleon captured the Saar early in the Franco-Prussian war but lost" the other great fortified area at the Swiss end of the two lines.

In this latter area the French have spent billions of francs in building fortifications and have concentrated tens of thousands of Senegalese and other troops to guard the vital Burgundian gate between the Jura and Vosges mountains.

German "Gibraltar."
Not a single shot has been fired across the Rhine river front in this vicinity since the war began, but Germans north of Basel are busy day and night strengthening their "Rhineland Gibraltar" at near-by Istein.

The Istein forts, considered the key to the entire south Baden Black forest, were inspected twice by Adolf Hitler just before the war began.

In view of the strength of both extremities of the Siegfried line foreign military observers in Switzerland expected the French to strike somewhere between the two.

Reports received here indicated that General Maurice Gamelin, generalissimo of the combined French-British forces, was directing his powerful army through steps planned for years on paper and backed up by men and materials.

Swiss Army Ready.
Railroad spurs for French railway guns, motor roads and air bases, many of which were constructed since Hitler came to power in 1933, are being used for the present French concentrations.

General Henri Guisan, commander-in-chief of the Swiss army, who is schooled in both German and French military methods, concentrated his strong, well-equipped citizen army in Basel.

The city itself was turned into a fort. Basel teemed with troops and every other street corner was converted into a stronghold with huge, steel girders, railroad ties and other building materials. Anti-tank spikes set in concrete guarded main entrances to the city.

By hammering harder at Germany in the west, the French strategy was to draw from the east some of the Nazi forces driving deeper into Poland.

There were no indications that the new Nazi troops in the west actually were pulled away from the eastern front, but military observers held that even if they were units in reserve up to now, Germany's potential striking power against Poland would be lessened just that much.

Press On Warsaw.
While Germany announced more victories in the east where she pressed the defenders of Warsaw, there were no reports from Berlin on the conflict on the western front.

Germany regarded herself as completely victorious in the seven-day-old undeclared war in Poland; not so the determined Poles.

As Nazi troops gripped the Warsaw defenders in their great vices, the Polish radio station at Lwow broadcast that the capital and a wide surrounding area was again bombed from the air. The broadcast claimed Polish defenders on Wednesday shot down 35 German planes.

The main jaw of the German drive was reported by Berlin to be only 20 miles from Warsaw.

British in France.
A British expeditionary force of undisclosed strength landed in France and presumably was at the front or on the way. British officers conferred with the French high command on further moves in the plan to harass Germany to ease the pressure on Poland.

Defense Measures.
At Ottawa, Lord Tweedsmuir, governor general of Canada, told an emergency session of parliament the Dominion government would be asked to approve measures for national defense and for co-operation with Britain in her war with Germany.

Following the governor general's speech from the throne, both houses adjourned until today without learning the details of the government's plans for Canadian assistance to Britain.

(Only the Dominion parliament has the power to authorize a declaration of war. Parliament has not acted, but a bill empowering the government to take action is expected to be introduced today.)

The Dominion's policy is expected to be clarified when Prime Minister Mackenzie King addresses the second day's session of the assembly.

"You will be asked to consider estimates to provide for expenditure which has been or may be caused by the state of war which

Nazis Work All Night Strengthening Lines

BASEL, Switzerland, Sept. 8. (Friday)—(P)—German labor battalions worked through the night at the Istein fort on the Rhine, north of Basel, apparently building additional pill boxes on the vine-covered slopes of the Nazi "Rhineland Gibraltar."

The workers used shielded lights which were invisible from the French side of the river. The mammoth Istein fortifications, dismantled during the World War, have been rebuilt much stronger than ever.

now exists," Lord Tweedsmuir told parliament.

"Canada Prepared."
Announcing the militia, naval and air forces were on active service and provisions made for coastal and internal defenses, the governor general added:

"My ministers are convinced that Canada is prepared to unite in a national effort to defend to the utmost liberties and institutions which are a common heritage."

Prime Minister King explained later that the governor general's reference to the existence of a state of war did not change Canada's position in relation to the European conflict.

"The speech from the throne made no change in the position of Canada as it has been since the proclamation under the war measures act was issued," the prime minister said.

"A formal statement defining the position of Canada will be issued following a session by parliament."

There has been considerable argument over the question whether a declaration of war by the United Kingdom automatically brings Canada into war, but the feeling here among observers is that parliament will be asked to take definite action in this connection.

Roosevelt Pledge.
The fact that Canada is preparing to help Great Britain recalls a pledge President Roosevelt made last year in a speech at Kingston, Ontario.

He said: "The Dominion of Canada is part of the sisterhood of the British empire. I give to you assurance that the people of the United States will not stand idly by if domination of Canadian soil is threatened by any other empire."

However, there is no sign that Canadian soil will be thus threatened. For one thing, the Atlantic ocean and British fleet stand between Canada and Germany.

Military experts at Washington are convinced that if a formidable foreign force actually invaded Canada, the United States would move immediately to her assistance, on the grounds of self-preservation.

Prime Minister Chamberlain told the house of commons the nation could "rest assured" that the navy would "increasingly bring under control" Germany's submarine raiders. He warned that a certain percentage of losses to shipping must be expected.

The admiralty reported 128 dead or missing from the British liner Athenia, sunk off the coast of Ireland Sunday night. Chamberlain insisted the vessel was the victim of a German U-boat, despite denials from Berlin.

Freighter Sunk.
Fewer than a dozen Americans were believed to be among the victims of the Athenia disaster.

The British freighter Manara was sunk 100 miles off Portugal. The 46 survivors said the vessel was torpedoed. Forty of the crew were missing, two others were known to be dead.

The United States liner Washington reported to Radiomarine in New York the rescue of 33 crew members of the Olivegrove, a Scottish freighter which the message said was torpedoed about 200 miles northwest of Spain. The Cunard Royal Sceptre was also torpedoed and sunk.

The royal air force was reported by Chamberlain to have made at least two hits in its spectacular raid on Germany's Kiel canal.

British destroyers dropped a series of depth bombs in an apparent attack on a submarine as the Batavier V was crossing the English channel with Sir Neville Henson, former British ambassador to Berlin, aboard.

Italy's position of virtual neutrality remained unchanged. There were indications discussions were under way to eliminate possible friction between Italy and Great Britain.

Premier Mussolini still was represented as ready to act in a peacemaker role, in the event of a speedy conquest of Poland by Italy's axis partner, Germany.

Authoritative sources in London, however, said the government was determined to wipe out "Hitlerism."

Some Italians were said to believe that if France were weakened by a long struggle, Italy might enter the conflict against her.

Diplomats in Rome were of the opinion the Rome-Berlin axis still was functioning.

In Washington, President Roosevelt enlarged his cabinet for "the duration of the emergency," to include the administrators of works, security and loans. A White House aide said there were no immediate plans to call congress.

Drive Against Spies.
At the same time the government moved to crush spy activities in the United States.

Powerful radio stations operated by warring European powers waged a day and night battle of the airways in intensive efforts to get across their own version of the conflict to the neutral nations of southeast Europe.

A spokesman for the Duke and Duchess of Windsor announced they would leave southern France on Friday for London, ending almost three years of exile for the former King of England.

Russia's policy of "neutrality from capitalistic warmongers" was lauded at meetings in Moscow and throughout the Soviet Union.

How French May Attempt To Break Through Nazis

With Krakow occupied by German troops and a double-barreled pincer movement in the north closing in on Warsaw, here is a version of how the French general staff may attempt to deliver a blow through the western front to relieve pressure on the hard-pressed ally.

A two-bladed smash at the Siegfried line was considered likely to permit the French to hammer the so-called "weaker" sector to the north while the main column of the allies could rip through the southern wing, push the Germans back on the Karlsruhe pivot and possibly advance along the border of old Austria. Allies hope for a friendly route through one-time Austria and Czechoslovakia. Experts agree the operation is based on a prolonged struggle.

RIVERS SAYS STATE AID FOR COUNTIES UP TO ASSEMBLY

Legislature Must Meet Before Financial Help Can Be Obtained, Commissioners Are Told.

By The Associated Press.
Members of the legislative committee of the Association of County Commissioners said Governor Rivers told them yesterday a special session of the legislature would be necessary before counties could expect financial assistance from the state.

"The Governor was emphatic in his statements," said J. A. McCurdy, of the DeKalb commission, chairman of the association's committee, "and it appears there is nothing for us to do but work for a session."

The committee called on the Governor at the executive mansion to discuss the plight of counties suffering from lack of funds, due to homestead tax exemption and loss of road contracts with the state.

The Governor was quoted as saying, however, that there could be no replacing of losses without a session.

Only last Saturday Rivers announced he had abandoned plans for a special session at this time, due to the unsettled international situation. He said he would make every effort to keep Georgia's schools in operation, however.

To Advise Commissioners.
McCurdy said the association's legislative committee would advise commissioners throughout the state to inform constituents of the situation and suggest that they work for a special session.

"Thus far we have no definite plans of procedure," he said, but added the hope that counties would consider the problem carefully before taking action.

"There are only three ways open," he said, "increase the tax rate, curtail county activities, or create a deficit. We hope and have so advised the commissioners that the latter course will not be taken."

Other members of the committee said the Governor was emphatic in stating that unless the legislature meets and provides funds he would insist on diversion of highway funds with which to meet school obligations.

The meeting at the executive mansion came while numerous counties were considering tax rates for the coming year. Several already have reported to the association headquarters here, indicating that curtailment of activities will be necessary unless a deficit results.

County Rates Set.
Some of the counties heard from include Wayne, rate unchanged, but with a cut in public health work scheduled; Sumter, unchanged at 12 mills; Laurens, unchanged at 17 mills; Bibb, unchanged at 21 mills; Spalding, unchanged at 15 1/2 mills; DeKalb, unchanged at 12 1/2 mills, but with the prescribed rate not including school bonds in the various districts; and Glynn, unchanged at 17 mills.

From Floyd county (Rome) came reports that the rate would be reduced from 15 to 14 mills.

Condition Serious; Jenkinsburg Collision Left 3 Dead.

Two survivors of a train-automobile crash at Jenkinsburg Wednesday night that claimed three lives were in Emory University hospital yesterday.

Killed when the automobile was struck by a passenger train at a midtown crossing were Mrs. Marcus Childs, Miss Martha Henley and Miss Mary Ruth Wells.

HORNSBY TO AID PERSONNEL BOARD

Will Confer on Civil Service Questions.

Atlanta's personnel board yesterday invited Police Chief M. A. Hornsby to sit in at a conference at 11 o'clock this morning at which an attempt will be made to clarify civil service provisions affecting clerical help in the police department.

The law is silent as to whether clerks in the police department come under the supervision and direction of the personnel board or under the civil service provisions of the police department itself. Conferees will seek to adjust the issue amicably, it was said.

The liver should pour out two pounds of bile into your bowels daily. If this bile is not flowing freely, your food does not digest. It just decays in the bowels. Gas builds up your stomach. You get constipated. Your whole system is poisoned and you feel sour, sick and the world looks pink.
A mere bowel movement doesn't get at the cause. It takes those good, old Carter's Little Liver Pills to get those two pounds of bile flowing freely and make you feel "up and up." SENECA M. GAMBLE.

SENECA M. GAMBLE TO HEAD CAMPAIGN

Former Atlantan Will Direct Promotion of 1939 Life Insurance Message.

A former resident of Atlanta, Seneca M. Gamble, has been selected to head the national advertising and promotional campaign for the 1939 annual message of life insurance, according to announcement yesterday.

The annual message is a joint institutional drive made each year by the nation's leading life insurance companies. This year's advertising will be run exclusively in newspapers, according to Mr. Gamble, and advertising space is being increased 25 per cent over last year.

Supplemented by programs of local groups of life underwriters, the national campaign will be concentrated in the week of October 23. The theme of this year's annual message will be "Life Insurance in Action."

"We plan to show the people of the country what they get out of life insurance last year," Mr. Gamble said. "In 1938 life insurance companies paid to living policyholders as well as beneficiaries the sum of approximately two and one-half billion dollars."

"That amount was one and one-half times the amount spent for national defense; it would have bought all the nation's bread and butter for a year; 46 leaves of bread for every man, woman and child in the country. Life insurance is today's harvest from yesterday's foresight."

Mr. Gamble was reared in Macon and entered the field of life insurance in 1924 in Atlanta, soon being made sales promotion manager. In 1930 Mr. Gamble went Blackpool, a watering place north of Liverpool, is filled with civilians evacuated from London.

His family was at first fearful that he had taken passage on the ill-fated Athenia. Beers' father is chief deputy clerk of United States district court for the northern district of Georgia.

$15,000 GEM LOSS PROBED IN ATLANTA

Jewels Reported Lost Between Chattanooga and Here by Saleswoman.

Atlanta police began investigation last night of the reported loss of between $15,000 and $25,000 worth of jewelry, including rings, bracelets and loose cut precious stones on a bus between Chattanooga and Atlanta and belonging to Miss Betty Prutinsky, a traveling saleswoman for a New York jewelry firm bearing her name.

The estimated value of the jewelry was based on figures given to the police by W. L. Watkins, head of an insurance firm, with which the jewelry and stones had been insured.

According to James McGuire, police record clerk, the jewels disappeared while Miss Prutinsky slept last Tuesday night on a bus trip from Chattanooga. She reported the loss to the police but did not stop in Atlanta and proceeded on her trip.

GEORGIA BANKERS TO END WORKSHOP WITH 6 LECTURES

Financial Leaders, Meeting at Emory, Are Told New Sources of Revenue Must Be Found.

Georgia bankers, meeting on the campus of Emory University at the state's first practical banking workshop and study conference, will conclude their three-day program today with six lectures.

Speakers will include Dr. E. A. Kincaid, of Richmond, Va., consulting economist of the Federal Reserve Bank system; H. Grady Huddleston, secretary, Tennessee Bankers Association; Dr. J. S. Wittmer, president of the First National Bank, Oneonta, Ala.; J. W. Speas, vice president, First National Bank of Atlanta; Alexander Wall, secretary treasurer, Robert Morris Associates, Philadelphia; and Orville A. Park, of Macon, general counsel, Georgia Bankers Association.

Yesterday, the conference heard Dr. Kincaid declare that "banking has broken away from its old moorings and is moving in a new direction."

New Revenue Sources. "Local loans and discounts still play an important part in modern banking," Dr. Kincaid declared, "but they have lost ground and there is no reason to expect they will recover appreciably."

"Bankers are thus compelled to find new sources of revenue."

New revenue sources which Dr. Kincaid believes will play an increasingly important part in the future, he listed as personal income loans, purchase of installment paper, intermediate credit to industry, and service charges. "Bankers are not withholding credit," he said, "they are giving all the credit they can and actually have salesmen on the street to lend money."

Have Large Surplus. "But even with these efforts, bankers find they still have a large surplus reserve of funds. And these funds must be invested, with the consequent result that investments are becoming of more and more importance to the modern banker."

Dr. Kincaid declared: "The present war quite possibly may create a demand for American goods and have a stimulating effect on industry, but unless present neutrality regulation is revised, we cannot expect an unmanageable boom."

Other speakers included E. S. Wooley, of New York; Lewis F. Gordon and Speas, of Atlanta; Wall and Thomas J. Kiphart, of Cincinnati. All of the group continued a program of lectures begun Wednesday.

At the second dinner meeting last night, the conference heard an address by Frank Totten, second vice president of the Chase National Bank, of New York City.

CHICAGO MILK PRICE UP. CHICAGO, Sept. 7.—(P)—Major dairy companies tonight announced the retail price of milk would be increased one cent a quart tomorrow. The Bowman and Borden-Wieland firms reported the new cost would be 12 cents for milk delivered to homes and 10 cents in stores.

U. S. Liner Manhattan Docks In N. Y. With 2,147 on Board

Most of Passengers Unaware They Had Passed Near Fleet of 40 German U-Boats at Sea; Anxiety Over Merchant Ships Grows.

NEW YORK, Sept. 7.—(P)—Anxiety increased hourly tonight over merchant ships of the warring nations as the U. S. Liner Manhattan hove safely into port with 2,147 passengers, most of them unaware that they had passed near a fleet of 40 German U-boats afloat in the seas.

N. E. Jamieson, of Toledo, Ohio, was the passenger on the Manhattan's over-size list who told of the submarine dangers lurking under the Atlantic.

"Before we left London," he said at the Hotel Biltmore tonight, "we were told by members of the staff of the American embassy in London that just off Cobe a fleet of at least 40 submarines had been located by detectors."

BUENOS AIRES, Sept. 7.—(P)—The Argentine government, feeling the need of products formerly imported from European nations now at war, tonight issued a decree which partly reopened the doors to United States trade closed last December.

The decree, which may foreshadow the conclusion of a mutually satisfactory trade treaty now under negotiation, permits the entry of such North American merchandise as fuels, electrical appliances, chemicals, drugs and newsprint which under the import licensing system in effect since December could find no market in Argentina.

Some of the men who fought in the first World War made merry last night at the American Legion home in Piedmont park while the second world war raged in Europe.

The occasion was the "homecoming" of Atlanta Post No. 1, celebrating the reopening of the newly-decorated club house and the beginning of the fall membership drive. Many former members of the post came back to mingle with their comrades. Approximately 700 persons attended.

Barbecue was served from 6 to 8 o'clock. It was followed by a dance for the Legionnaires and their wives.

Among those attending were Hoyt Brown, of Baxley, state commander; Stanley Jones, state adjutant, and commanders of numerous neighboring posts.

Improvements to the club house include an additional club room, new ceiling and paneling throughout, and a modern lighting system.

DECENTRALIZATION OF INCINERATORS IS PROPOSED HERE

Atlanta and Fulton Officials Study Plan to Increase Disposal Service in the Outlying Areas.

City and county planning commissions and sanitary engineers yesterday discussed a proposal by county authorities to decentralize the incineration of garbage with a view of extending sanitary services into outlying sections, but failed to reach any conclusion pending a further consideration within the next two weeks.

County representatives proposed to establish several small incinerators in various sections of Atlanta rather than erect a large one to do all the work near the site of the present plant. The city is preparing to spend about $500,000 to supplant the present 28-year-old one.

In the conference were Eugene O'Brien, Courtland S. Gilbert, Walter S. McNeil, Raymond W. Torres, Councilman Frank Beck, R. G. Hickins and Frank Spires. No date has been set for the meeting at which the matter will be decided, but Beck told those interested he would call another meeting before the city proceeded too far to change its plans if the suggestion proves feasible.

Advocates of the decentralization program, said it would shorten the haul, but it was pointed out that cost of operating several plants would exceed hauling costs. A survey of hauling and disposal costs showed that local costs of $2.09 a ton for hauling, which also includes street cleaning work, and a gross cost of 87 cents a ton for burning garbage is far below costs in other cities of Atlanta's population bracket.

LIGHTED CYCLORAMA PAYING EXTRA COST

Other City Parks Attractions Drop in Receipts From Cool Weather.

More than half the cost of dramatizing the Cyclorama painting of the Battle of Atlanta with lights and sound effects has been repaid to the municipal treasury in increased receipts thus far this year, according to figures released yesterday by George I. Simons, general manager of Atlanta parks. Total receipts this year were $43,360.25, as compared with $23,078.60 through August of last year. The city has expended $37,174.19, less than twice the excess of 1938 receipts through August, as compared with the total for 1938.

While Cyclorama receipts continued to gain, a comparatively cool summer forced receipts in other divisions of the parks downward, as compared with the 1938 vacation season. Five municipally operated golf courses brought in $30,688.25 thus far this year, as compared to $31,440.75 for the same period in 1938; swimming receipts totaled $12,249.60 for the 1939 season as against $13,498.40 for 1938; pony tracks have a total of $1,795.75 thus far for 1939 as against $2,094.45 for 1938, and tennis $1,834.10 for 1939 and $2,768.20 for 1938.

'SMOKY' IS READY FOR HIS THIRD WAR

City Inspector Jones' Offer Accepted in Washington.

A. W. (Smoky) Jones, city smoke inspector, yesterday was ready to enlist for the duration of a war for a third time.

In the Spanish-American War, he served as a naval engineer, and when the United States entered the World War, he was assistant engineer in the fuel administration for Georgia under the late Governor L. G. Hardeman.

Yesterday he had a letter from Major General E. S. Adams, of the War Department, Washington, telling him that his name has been put on the "official record for such service (fuel administration) as needs for the service may require."

Jones wrote the War Department when the present crisis arose offering his service for another stretch.

With Lifted Eyes

It is too easy to say that war in Europe means that civilization is about to crumble; that man is going backward; that no progress in humanity or in our attitudes toward hates and emotions has been made.

The world war is not coming to us as it did in 1914.

It is plain that mankind's eyes have been lifted toward a higher goal since 1914, or rather since 1918. It may be seen that civilization has made progress, slowly, it is true, but progress just the same.

Only four nations are at war. In 1914 there were nine at war in the first week of August. It will be difficult for others to keep up. But already Italy, while suspicion remains she may be acting as Germany's purchasing agent in America, has indicated she intends to remain neutral. Russia has announced her neutrality, as has Japan.

What is even more important is that every nation at war took elaborate care seeking to justify their action. They knew the force of public opinion was against such action and that their own people did not desire war. This latter fact was true even in Germany. Some of the efforts to explain war, notably the German explanations, have been so fantastic they have had an effect in this country contrary to that sought. They may have been effective in Germany where the people are being told no shot has been fired on the western front despite the fact wounded are arriving in Paris. What they will think on learning of wounded and dead Germans may be imagined.

Nevertheless, all four nations plainly showed their knowledge of the fact they opposed a moral front in going to war.

At no time was there a blowing of whistles and a celebration of the entry into war. Not even Germany presented that and people there have had war presented as an attractive proposition. Prime Ministers Chamberlain and Daladier spoke of the profound regret.

There are millions of people today convinced that war settles nothing and that war is a senseless manner of settling problems. There are millions today who believe that a federation of nations might enforce peace. There are many today preaching peace instead of hate. Their voices, in which this newspaper is joined, may not be so loud as the hymns of hate but they are there and increasingly will be heard.

There is much in this war to encourage those who believe that humanity is marching forward with lifted eyes.

The World War of 1914 is by no means as yet repeating itself.

No Profiteering!

The people of America will heartily commend the national administration's announcement it will fight to protect the citizens of this country from profiteering and from unscrupulous operators who take advantage of war to make huge profits.

The administration is handicapped by lack of laws. Congress must bear the blame because it adjourned without giving the administration requested laws to prevent this occurrence. It is to be assumed that congress will remedy this as soon as possible after reconvening.

Meanwhile all reputable businessmen, and most American businessmen are reputable, patriotic citizens, will support the President in his determination the people shall not be victimized.

A geyser of ice-cold soda water is uncovered in faraway Siberia. Plans are afoot, we hear, to rush a baked ham to the spot and open a pharmacy.

For the money tossed off in a week of modern war, whoozis could have bought Danzig and fixed every inhabitant up with a pound of butter.

A typical noonday meal at a CCC camp included roast pork and applesauce, vegetables, salad, pie and coffee. Then they want you to go out and plant trees.

In peace-loving Utopia, a statesman suspected of having referred to "our glor-r-rious destiny" is picked up on sight.

Picking up a late newspaper, we suppose Einstein is tempted to fall back on one of the earlier guesses—that nothing is real.

Fulton County Tax Rate

Last year the tax rate in Fulton county was 12 1-2 mills. It is now proposed to increase the rate by one mill, putting into effect for the purpose of 1939 taxation, a rate of 13 1-2 mills. A majority of the county commissioners are said to favor the increase. The Chamber of Commerce, other civic organizations, many individuals and businessmen oppose it. The county commission meets today to act upon the proposal. There are conflicting opinions.

According to the opinion of the county auditor the 13 1-2 mills rate is necessary if the county budget is to be brought into an approximate balance. Those commissioners who favor it feel they cannot logically set a rate which would return insufficient revenue to pay the disbursements called for in the budget. One commissioner expressed the view that only a great change in basic spending policies, such as drastic salary reductions and cuts in services, would balance the budget without additional taxes.

Many businessmen feel the need for economy, for thrift; that a dollars worth of services has not always been forthcoming for each dollar's worth of taxes. The banks, which lend the county operating money each year until tax revenue starts coming in, insist upon the increased rate.

All of the foregoing opinions are seemingly based upon sound reasoning. They are honest opinions. They deserve careful consideration. But to get a better perspective there are, perhaps, a number of factors which should be accentuated.

The people of Fulton county are not willing to permit essential services to be reduced to a point where the value of such services will be impaired or of little use. The people's health must be protected and their property safeguarded. Those in want must be cared for as in the past. On the other hand the people insist on getting full value for every tax dollar collected. They want a thoroughly economical, business-like management of county affairs. They will be satisfied with nothing less.

The prospect of additional taxes will serve to renew the interest of the people of Atlanta in the fact they are paying for two governments and that they might again look into the feasibility of a consolidated government. It might be a very excellent idea.

Leaflets Instead of Bombs!

Those prognosticators of the unpredictable, who foretold the destruction of London during the first day of war, with a humbled Britain on her knees begging for mercy, seem to have been double-crossed, or if another viewpoint is preferred, left out on a limb. Instead of England being bombed promiscuously from the air with high explosives and poison gas by the Germans, Germany is being bombarded from the air with "destructive" leaflets by the British.

"British planes," to quote the dispatches, "laid down another barrage of propaganda leaflets over Germany today. Not a German plane tried to interfere."

These reports seem strangely in accord with news from France where the offense merely has been said to have progressed "normally." But no official announcement has been made of actual fighting on a scale such as naturally would be expected with huge armies in the field. Nothing has been said of named objectives being taken, of heavy casualties which necessarily must occur in the event of military operations against a heavily fortified position such as the Siegfried line.

On the other hand news reports portend disaster for Poland. Germans shell Warsaw. German victories in all sectors. Polish officials abandon capital. Field Marshal Smigly-Rydz offers resignation. Foreign embassy staffs flee. Such are the events taking place on the eastern front.

What is the meaning of this seeming reluctance to begin fighting in the west, particularly by the Germans, on the scale generally anticipated? Are Great Britain and France to be placated, perhaps misled, by a policy of German nonresistance or apparent distaste for the fight, while Poland is being acquired as a pawn in peace negotiations?

Perhaps the British have information that the German people have been misguided, that they are against war with Britain, that the "barrage of leaflets" will enlighten them to the extent of rebelling against the present order in Germany. If this, perchance, be true, then stranger still is the policy of noninterference with the procedure by the highly advertised German air force.

In any event, whether peace negotiations follow or the dreaded, prolonged, exhausting war becomes a reality, one cannot help marveling at the paradox of dropping leaflets from the air instead of the expected, long feared, destructive bombing of major cities.

One who has heard the singing of young socialites in New York night clubs thinks it unfair to criticize. The silver spoon may still be in the mouth.

In upstate New York, a baker's runaway horse scattered pies along the route, while spellbound spectators cried, "What government agency is this?"

Editorial of the Day

EYES ON THE AZORES.

(From The Dallas Morning News.)
Californians would not feel quite safe if an unfriendly power held the Hawaiian islands, yet the Azores are as close to us as Hawaii. A mere overnight hop from New York, the Azores are only 1,170 miles from Newfoundland. Using the Azores as an air base, an enemy power could rain bombs on several of our largest cities. Use of the Azores as an air and naval base might also enable an enemy to keep oil supplies from reaching France and Great Britain.

At present, Portugal is friendly to us and is a nominal ally of Great Britain. But there have been rumors of moves by which Portugal and her empire might be conquered by Germany or joined to Spain, which is now under Nazi influence. Either move would be of serious concern to us. Lately the British have made some sort of secret agreement with Portugal concerning use of the Azores in the event of war, but this understanding would not hold if the Portuguese government itself were overthrown.

We hardly could stretch our Monroe Doctrine to cover the Azores, since they are closer to Europe than to us; but the strategic position of the Azores makes them of great concern to all Americans. Both defense and commercial interests should, if occasion arises, lead us to insist that the Azores not be allowed to fall into the hands of an unfriendly power. They represent an international crossroads for air and ocean commerce to which all countries need access.

THE CAPITAL PARADE

By JOSEPH ALSOP AND ROBERT KINTNER.

PEACE INSURANCE WASHINGTON, Sept. 7.—Now that the first shock and turmoil are past, the outlines of a coherent administration policy toward the European war are beginning to emerge. The policy may be briefly described, in the words of one high official, as "aiding the democracies in every way short of intervention, on the theory that the best way to keep this country out is to keep the democracies strong."

The theory seems a soundly realistic one. No one familiar with the ways of American public opinion can doubt that the present wave of sympathy for England and France would be transformed, if England and France were in danger of defeat, into a wave of active belligerency. Keeping the democracies strong, it is equally obvious, will avert the temptation and perhaps the necessity to be belligerent.

The signs of the administration policy may easily be read in the terms of the President's public pronouncements, as well as heard in the talk behind the scenes. Very striking evidence of it was his rejection of the Wilsonian "neutral in thought and word" attitude in his radio speech to the nation, and the repetition of that rejection in the neutrality proclamation, in which he declared that American neutrality would not interfere "with the free expression of opinion and sympathy." These were, in effect, open invitations to public opinion to support the policy of aiding the democracies.

DOUBLE TEST Possibly the basic theory of administration policy might be put a little more strongly, as being that the American people cannot afford to, and because of their natural sympathies will not, permit the democracies to be defeated. That being the theory, the real test of every American move becomes the question, does it help the democracies without risking American involvement?

For example, at the famous war cabinet meeting, the President is understood to have suggested conveying American merchant and passenger ships to protect them from German submarine attack. When he made the suggestion, old navy destroyers were already being reconditioned, partly with a view to being used as convoys. It was, however, pointed out to the President by State Department experts that the use of convoys did not meet the second half of the double test described above. American involvement was risked, since an encounter between a convoy and a submarine would be an act of war. Thus it is questionable whether the convoy suggestion will be acted upon.

THE TIME IS SHORT There are plenty of other schemes in the air, meanwhile, for giving the democracies the needed aid. In view of the atmosphere prevailing in circles closest to the President, it seems most probable that the proposals for revision of the neutrality act in the last congress will be deemed sufficient when congress meets again. But there is wide disagreement on just what should be demanded.

The minimum mentioned is blanket permission for purchases of all sorts of war supplies in this country. The maximum is outright repeal of the neutrality act plus considerable weakening of the Johnson act and other statutes preventing financing of arms purchases by American credits. It will not be surprising if a demand arises to have English and French arms purchases directly financed by the government, through such agencies as the Export-Import Bank. Plans for action along these lines are already being tentatively discussed.

Indeed, the danger is not that the administration will fail to give all possible aid to the democracies, but that it will go too far, arousing congressional suspicions. The time is short, horribly short. Considerably more than half of the 400 training planes and 250 reconnaissance planes ordered by the British have been delivered. But the British are extremely anxious to order bombers, while the French, whose need is even more acute than that of the British, must actually wait action on the neutrality act to get 600 bombers they thought and paid for some months ago. Above all, it is important that fighting planes should be continuously available to both nations, for, if they are ever put at a really severe disadvantage in the air, restoring the balance will be dreadfully difficult.

Considering the pressure of events from across the Atlantic, and the pressure of sentiment within his administration, the President will tend to hurry his shots. It is to be hoped that he represses the tendency, for public opinion will soon mature to a point where his task as a national leader will be fairly easy.

SILHOUETTES

By RALPH T. JONES.

If American tea
Were English tea
They'd drink it,
In Georgia and Jersey.
If they made coffee here
The American way
They'd love it
On Thames or on Mersey.

Black Coffee,

And Cream.

WALLASEY, England, Aug. 25. (By Mail.)—Now English tea is a delight. It has a taste and an aroma that is almost unknown in America. And English bread and butter becomes a food surpassing most cakes or pastries.

But, no matter how excellent the tea, there comes a time when wanderers from the States think with longing upon a cup of coffee from, say, the Ansley coffee room or the Hamilton food emporium.

So, the other afternoon, friend wife and I, being in Liverpool and feeling the need of that sustenance known to the Britisher as his afternoon tea, entered a Kardomah cafe.

After scanning the menu we ordered brown bread and butter and two cups of coffee—black, with cream.

The waitress brought two cups of so-called coffee, with hot milk already in it, to such extent that it tasted more like cambric tea than anything else.

Bolland's, In Chester.

We visited, a day or two ago, Bolland's, in Chester. This is a most famous establishment where they make cakes and pastries dreamlike in allure. They serve, too, teas, and we have succumbed to this afternoon tea habit.

So we passed under an ornate sign over the entrance, which announced the firm was "By Appointment, makers of cakes for His Majesty the King and Her Majesty the Queen," and we ordered a Devonshire tea.

In addition to the pot of China tea, the pot of hot water and the milk and sugar, there was a plate of scones and cookies (Cookies, here, are a kind of bread roll, slightly sweet.) There was an individual pot of raspberry jam for each and a dish full of Devonshire cream. Thick, you know, so that it stands like a paste, when you spoon it to your plate.

One member of the party, an American, had indigestion all the rest of the day.

On An ## English Train.

We rode, after disembarking from the Aquitania, on the boat train to London. Had afternoon tea, served in our compartment, en route. After some two hours of stop-over in London, we were again on the fast train for Liverpool. The waiters were passing through with more afternoon tea trays.

Someone said to me, "Would your wife like afternoon tea?" Jumping to unwarranted conclusion, I promptly said, "No, she hasn't the habit."

Five minutes later friend wife called across the compartment to inform me she thought she was already getting British habits, anyway she'd like a tray of afternoon tea if I could, please, attract the attention of a waiter.

You never can tell, can you?

FAIR ENOUGH

By WESTBROOK PEGLER.

Fritz Kuhn NEW YORK, Sept. 6.—The best anti-Nazi propaganda in the United States is neither Jew nor Englishman but a more or less naturalized Aryan German inmate of Adolf Hitler himself. His name is Fritz Kuhn, he is Fuehrer of the German-American Bund, and he has been fought no less angrily by leaders of the Steuben society of America than by the Bnai Brith, the Czechs, the British and the Poles.

Two years ago Theodore H. Hoffman, national chairman of the Steuben society, denounced Kuhn as an interloper who would presume to tell the members what they might think, where they must buy, where they might read, for whom they must vote, and what color of clothes they must wear.

Mr. Hoffman concluded by demanding, "who anointed this Fritz with the sacred caustic oil of divine dominion?"

About the same time a prominent member of the society wrote: "We in the Steuben society have always been up against a stone wall when it came to a question of getting suitable publicity in the English press of New York. On the other hand, the Nazis have never sought to get front page publicity. This type of co-operation has hurt the cause of those Americans of German extraction who are seeking to stamp out Nazism and keep hatred, prejudice and intolerance from our shores."

Unfortunately, our Jewish co-citizens have been letting their hatred of the German government be visited on German-American business men. This is not common practice among Jewish employers and other Jewish people, but it is, nevertheless, evidenced in many business organizations and places of employment.

Kuhn's Mr. Kuhn, it should be emphasized in the following interests of internal composure and tolerance, is a humiliated and a plague to the decent, patriotic American of German birth or extraction. He has been repudiated by experts, and he speaks only for himself and a small, ignorant alien minority and for his own Fuehrer. The purpose of his Bund is revealed in quotations from Nazi official documents proclaiming that all persons of German blood "belong to Hitler's state, no matter to which state they have sworn allegiance." That includes many native and naturalized Americans who fiercely resent the aspersions.

These quotations, published in book form under the title German Reich and Americans of German origin, under the sponsorship of Nicholas Murray Butler, Samuel Seabury, Henry L. Stimson, Monsignor Ryan and others, expose the purpose of Fuehrer Kuhn. One says: "We reject the concept of a cosmopolitan German who chief ambition is to assimilate with the people of the country in which he lives." Another says: "In addition to the official German legislation there are now established local groups of the Nazi party foreign organizations in 60 countries of the world."

Another, taken from an official speech by E. W. Bohle, Fuehrer of the Nazi department for the fomentation of treason in foreign countries, officially known as the foreign organization of the party, says: "The main accusation against the foreign organization and party comrades abroad is that we are causing unrest in the German colonies and destroying their unity. If fight means unrest, then we admit we created unrest."

The Bund's There are many other gems, but these suffice to prove the mission and attachment of Kuhn's Bund and to indicate the embarrassment suffered by many loyal Americans by reason of his speeches and the failure of their fellow-Americans to discriminate between those who follow and those who loathe him. That embarrassment and the injustice of it will increase unless the press coverage to acts of repudiation and the people, especially the Jew, to learn to distinguish the sedulous Bundsman from the legitimate American.

Kuhn promises to "throw out of office" the President of the United States, a threat which, uttered against Hitler in Germany by no matter whom, would qualify the speaker for an appointment at the chopping block. Some American States, might wish to lock him up or blood, might wish to hang him out. But, on second thought, all who detest Hitlerism would prefer to let him stay, realizing that every time he opens his mouth he aggravates the decent hatred of everything he represents.

He is, by paradox, the greatest single force against Hitlerism now operating among us. If he is dangerous at all it is only because his insolence might goad this country into active participation in the war against the loathesomeness of which he is a worthy spokesman.

ONE WORD MORE

By RALPH MCGILL.

THE ENIGMA OF ITALY There is grave concern among the military "arm-chair" war experts the same situation exists among the professional strategists of this and other countries.

There is a very grave suspicion the axis still exists between Rome and Berlin; that Italy deliberately is remaining out of war. The first, and most important reason, is that the people do not want war and especially would dislike fighting for Germany. The second is that Mussolini could be of very real value to Germany as a purchasing agent in this country where Germany cannot purchase because of laws and blockades. Italy also would be of extreme value as a neutral, yet friendly country, by serving as a source of information and a haven for the financial, commercial and espionage agents of Germany.

Pope Pius XII, one of the most profound and able men in Europe, may become the greatest factor for peace in the world, if indeed he does not already possess that distinction.

It may be recalled that when he, as Cardinal Pacelli, was among those eligible to become pope of the church, he openly was opposed by Germany. He had, in his customary fearless and honest manner, spoken out against persecution of his church in Germany. Therefore the Nazi influence was against him. Time magazine reports this week that Pope Pius XII had a long conversation with the royal family of Italy at the time war was nearing. It is believed there is a sort of division in Italy between the Pope and the royal family and Mussolini. The Italian people, however, strongly support the Pope and his attitude toward war. This very factor, plus the fact that Germany has aligned herself with the atheistic and anti-Christian government of Russia, may become one of the more important movements for peace in Europe. It may even be strong enough, when the decision is faced, to swing Italy to the side of the Allies.

The entire thought of the Christian world is against this war. It is indeed fortunate that Pope Pius is in a position to make this force felt. He is not afraid to wield it with all his intelligence, prayer and will.

THE GERMAN PLAN It becomes clearer that the German high command does not wish the German people to know that France and England are fighting.

This is illustrated by the fact that Germany still insists there is no fighting on the western front. There is fighting. The French dead and wounded are reaching Paris. Undoubtedly there are dead and wounded Germans. But such is the contrary of the German government over its sources of information that the people, other than those who live on the western front, are unaware of fighting. The German people never believed Germany would go to war with France and England, more especially England. In addition they were told the two nations were decadent democracies which would not fight.

Germany wants to win a quick war in Poland, make a peace there and then turn to the allies and ask—"What now?"

It is just possible the Poles may hold them up for a while. The Poles were supposed to have a first-rate army. Word that those captured had out-of-date equipment does not sound good but the assumption may be that the better armed troops are not yet really in the fight.

England yesterday okayed a loan to Poland for the purchase of planes and war supplies. This indicates Poland and England do not believe the end is in sight. A loan would not be granted to a nation about to surrender. Not, at any rate, by England.

Nevertheless, it does not look good. Germany, with one of the finest mechanized armies in the world, ought to win. Ethiopia fought us that rain and mud, the allies of all defense armies of the past, are not nearly so potent as allies. Mud and rain cannot always halt machines. England and France must put much pressure on the western front that the German people will learn there is fighting there. That will help.

ENGLISH PROPAGANDA

England's leaflets do not seem important. It is wrong to suspect, even, that all Germany wanted to begin a revolution was for a gun to be fired.

It should be remembered, even by those who dislike Hitler most, that the Germans were severely and unreasonably oppressed after the war; that there was starvation and national despair in Germany because of this oppression; that Hitler has done much for them. No one dislikes Hitler and those things for which he stands more than I. But it is foolish to ignore facts. A majority of the people believed in him. I imagine a majority still goes along with him.

Nevertheless, the British would not have sent their planes to drop pamphlets had not their secret services advised it. If the Germans were to assimilate with the people of the country in which they live, some cities are bombed; then the people will begin to remember the English pamphlets—and to wonder. Therefore, it was an excellent idea to drop them even if the fruits of the idea do not for some time become evident.

Germany also has enough successes in Poland to whip up enthusiasm; the Fuehrer himself, with his customary trait of exhibitionism much in evidence, has visited the front; has been so merciful as to bend over and speak to the wounded with Polish bullets, probably manufactured by Krupp, in their bellies. Germany probably thinks it's a good war.

All except, of course, those mothers who are sobbing in some quiet room of the house, holding a telegram notifying them that a son has died. Gloriously, of course. But, nevertheless, permanently dead, "Pro Patria."

If the Parents Fail In Private, the Kids Will Show It In Public

By ROBERT QUILLEN.

These things might have occurred anywhere, in our time, so it isn't necessary to mention the locality.

In one of the better homes—meaning one inhabited by well-to-do people—a party was in progress. The daughter of the house, in her seventeenth year, was entertaining boys and girls whose ages ranged from 16 to 19. The boys wore dinner jackets.

A small crystal globe resting on a square of ebony attracted two of the boys and they began to play catch with it. When a sweet-faced, timid lady, mother of the hostess, asked them to play with something else, they stared at her coldly until she fled and then continued their game.

One of the other boys, who had had a few drinks, sat on the corner of a mahogany table, talking with a cigar in his mouth. When the cigar had burned half its length, he took it from his mouth and crushed it on the polished surface of the table.

The sweet-faced lady appeared at his elbow, whispering in anguished desperation: "Oh, please! Won't you use the ash tray?"

Two other boys laughed loudly, without mirth. A third asked brightly: "What did the old crab say?"

The second came in a drug store, where almost every table is occupied by noisy young people. They talk loudly without finishing a sentence, and giggle back and forth in nervous excitement. The boys are showing off for the girls and the girls are showing off for the boys.

One of the boys who plays football bends and twists a spoon handle to show how strong he is. The spoon cost the drug store 30 cents.

At another table a boy attempts some construction feat with empty glasses and the glasses shatter on the marble table. He laughs loudly to hide his embarrassment, then sobers quickly and mutters: "Let's get out of here."

A waiter who doesn't share the general amusement speaks to him in a low voice and leads him to the cashier's desk. When he returns, a girl expresses the feeling shared by all when she asks in a tone of resentment and injured innocence: "How much did the old sourpuss stick you?"

In another drug store two well-dressed young men, apparently of good stock, order fancy sodas which are served with long spoons. The store would ordinarily make a profit of about six cents on the double order; but when the young men leave, the spoons are missing. They cost 37 cents each. It isn't called stealing when well-dressed people take things as "souvenirs."

Youngsters aren't all like that, of course. And those who are deserve some pity; they didn't get the right training at home.

COTTON BLOOMS NOW MAKE HONEY

Bees Find Another Use for Southern Plant.

Bees are making honey from cotton blooms now.

And that adds another use to the long list of products made from the southern farm plant.

Commissioner of Agriculture Columbus Roberts values the honey produced annually in Georgia at $1,000,000, plus the revenue derived from sale of queen bees and hive bees to Canadians.

In many sections much honey is made almost entirely from the cotton blooms and is of a white variety with an entirely different flavor.

Honey plants and trees in north Georgia include sourwood, poplar, basswood, holly trees and mountain flowers; south Georgia plants include gallberry, tupelo white holly, Mexican clover and mixed flowers; middle Georgia, blackgum trees, blackberry, cotton and mixed flowers.

Americans Blame Hitler For Second World War, National Survey Reveals

Gallup Poll

By DR. GEORGE GALLUP, American Institute of Public Opinion.

PRINCETON, N. J., Sept. 7.—For the last 20 years the German people have ranked under the stigma of responsibility for the first World War, fastened on them by the Treaty of Versailles. Historians have debated the question of "war guilt" for two decades.

But whatever later historians may decide, it can be recorded that the vast majority of the American people were in no uncertainty at the outset as to what nation brought about "the second World War."

More than eight Americans in every ten (82%) believe that the blame must rest on Germany and especially on the shoulders of the German chancellor and fuhrer—Adolf Hitler.

That fact is indicated in an important nation-wide referendum conducted by the American Institute of Public Opinion since the outbreak of hostilities a week ago.

In an objective test of the American reaction the Institute interviewed men and women in all parts of the United States, so selected as to represent as perfectly as possible the 45,000,000 national electorate. Using the same methods it has employed in forecasting numerous state and national election contests, the Institute asked:

"Which country or countries do you consider responsible for causing the present war?"

The replies of all those interviewed were:

GERMANY	82%
ENGLAND AND FRANCE	3
VERSAILLES TREATY	3
POLAND	1
ALL OTHERS	5
NO OPINION	6

100%

The Institute provided no lists; all replies were spontaneous. Interestingly enough, only 6 per cent said they were undecided in their own minds or without opinions about war responsibility.

Although the United States remains a neutral in the European war, the attitude of the American people on the question of "war guilt" is an important one. Both Germany and the Allies have attempted to justify the war not only to their own people but to the chief neutrals.

Determination of the "war guilt" question in favor of the Allies and against Germany will undoubtedly be a factor leading to increased sympathy for the allied cause.

Germany, on the other hand, must labor under the disadvantage of "guilt," especially if she should be brought to book by a victorious coalition of Allies as she was in 1919.

The comments of voters in the Institute survey have been carefully analyzed, and they show that the American public is singling out Hitler himself—rather than the German people or even the German government—for chief blame.

More than two-thirds of those commenting specify "Hitler's demands," "Hitler's greed for territory," or "Hitler's colossal ambitions" as chiefly responsible.

Only 3 per cent name England or France, while an additional 2 per cent lay the blame on "the last generation of French and British" or "the Treaty of Versailles."

Slightly less than 1 per cent blame Poland, in spite of the charges laid against the Poles in official German statements.

In general, Institute surveys show, Americans are much more unanimous about "war guilt" today than they were regarding the first World War. In the first survey on the question of "war guilt" ever conducted in the United States, the Institute two years ago asked Americans what nation, if any, they held chiefly to blame for the war of 1914-1918.

Only 45 per cent said they could single out any one nation for such blame. Of those singling out a particular nation, however, 77 per cent, or 35 per cent of the total, said blame should rest with Germany.

SUNDAY—The Gallup Poll reports public opinion on the question: "Should the Constitution of the United States be changed to require a national vote before congress could draft men for war overseas?"

Heirs to Mysterious Mayes Fortune Will Seek Clues as Family Rallies

'Considerable' Sum of Money Believed to Have Been Deposited in a Bank Before War Between the States; Recovery Hope Regarded Faint.

The mysterious Mayes fortune, either swelled enormously by the Galyinistic miracle of compound interest; taken home by a Yankee soldier; rusting away under the ground somewhere, or converted into Confederate greenbacks, yesterday was one with the lost continent of Atlantis, the crown jewels of Maximilian and Carlotta; the lost tribes of Israel, peace on earth, and the long looked-for key to Mayan hieroglyphics.

In short, it can't be found. No trace of it can be found. But like other valuable lost objects and formulae, the legend hangs on, growing in the telling.

It all goes back to William Mayes, who lived between 1789 and 1862.

Mayes, along with his brothers and sisters, is supposed to have placed a considerable sum of money in the hands of the ordinary of Banks county to care for an invalid sister until her death.

When the sister died, the contributors called for the money, but William either forgot or didn't bother.

His descendants presumed the ordinary placed William's share in a bank to draw the luscious interest of the time. And more than 30 years ago they began to look for it. The signature of nearly all the Mayes' heirs had been placed on paper, when the paper disappeared. There are, of course, rumors of a disreputable member of the family who didn't like his cousins.

And today the search continues. But the obstacles are many, and chances of recovery slim.

Perhaps, sigh the die-hards, the money was placed in an Athens bank. But, counter the unpleasant realist, what good is a fortune that must have been converted into Confederate greenbacks and bonds by some patriotic banker.

But, say the pros hopefully, remembering stories of many burying the family plate beneath the scuppernon arbor, great-grandpa's fortune may have been in gold and silver.

And there it stands today. And at the annual reunion of the May descendants at the Marietta camp ground September 17, the ghosts of departed bankers and Jackson county ordinaries will be invoked.

as the remodeling is completed, in about 30 days, they will be transferred to this dwelling, and the space now occupied by them also made into rooms for patients.

Crawford W. Long Capacity Increased by Purchase of Adjacent Property.

To increase capacity of Crawford W. Long Memorial hospital on Linden street, it was announced yesterday, additional property along Prescott street, adjoining the hospital on the south, had been purchased for $17,500.

It is understood that the newly acquired property, which is the present home of the Fulton County Medical Society, 32 Prescott street, will not be utilized for hospital use immediately, but ultimately will be made a part of the institution and will provide about 50 more beds for patients. The medical society will continue at its home for a time.

A large frame dwelling adjoining the hospital on Linden street, which has been owned for some time by the institution is now being remodeled as an addition to the nurses' home. At present the nurses are housed on two floors of the hospital buildings, but as soon

Edward Ellis and Isham Kendrick were sentenced to four years each in prison camps with six-year suspended sentences to follow. Walter Collins got three years straight and seven years suspended, while D. A. Booker pleaded guilty and got one year on public works and nine years suspended. Judge John S. McClelland gave the heavy sentences after evidence showed the negroes broke into 30 automobiles.

Fred Patterson, B. L. Bugg and Wiley Moore petitioned the superior court to dissolve the Alliance charter, since all work of the corporation is ended.

ARNALL ELECTION OUSTER IN COURT

Supreme Judges Hear Briefs in Wood's Appeal.

Briefs were submitted to the Georgia supreme court yesterday by Ellis Arnall and former Congressman John S. Wood as oral arguments were foregone in their fight over the attorney generalship of Georgia.

The case reached the high court on Wood's appeal from a Coweta court order overruling his petition to oust Arnall, incumbent, on the contention that Wood was legally elected by 3,532 votes written on the ballot for him in the June 6, 1939, general election.

Arnall argued no candidate for attorney general could be elected legally until the September, 1940, primary. He was appointed by Governor Rivers to fill the unexpired term of the late M. J. Yeomans.

SAVANT PREDICTS REVOLT IN REICH

particularly that Danzig and the corridor were not worth fighting for, Dr. Loemker observed.

Felt Britain Wouldn't Fight.

They felt that Hitler would not go to war. They also thought England would be very foolish to fight for Poland, and therefore anticipated no difficulties from any outside source should war with Poland come.

The financial situation in Germany is probably responsible for war now, more than any particular political or racial problem, Dr. Loemker felt.

"Hitler has built his entire economic structure on credit. The deficit was so great that it would be impossible to ever balance his budget. Undoubtedly he was working toward a crisis. This particular incident happened to be the one he chose."

As for the economic alliance with Russia, Dr. Loemker found that city dwellers were fairly well reconciled to such an agreement, but farmers and people in rural communities found the idea strange and inhumane. Dr. Loemker was in Berlin when it was discussed.

Chief opposition to Hitler in Germany comes from labor, from the organized church, from the farmer and the middle class. Among older people there is more pronounced opposition. His great hold is over youth, though the reason for it is somewhat vague, according to the professor.

"Of course, the Germans have to be careful what they say about Hitler. The opposition of a great many groups is apparent more in their humor than in any other way."

"Particularly when the secret police are so active, everyone exercised extreme caution. With a war underway a large number of these Gestapo officers may be called to the front. That may give the opposition the opportunity it needs to become organized."

"I found no German who felt that the annexation of Austria was wrong. The dismemberment of Czechoslovakia was considered strategically necessary to Germany in spite of the fact that the people conquered were not Germans. On the other hand, the Germans are not able to understand that Danzig, largely a German city, and the Polish Corridor could be strategically necessary to the Poles."

"The news we are getting does not tell the whole story. If England and France are doing much fighting we would hear more than we do."

Mrs. T. H. Read, housewife: "There is too much news to weigh each statement carefully, but my impression from the radio and from reading the biggest stories in the papers is that everybody is waiting for somebody else to fire the big gun."

Mrs. V. G. Moore, housewife: "The big powers are waiting for the time when Hitler will let to quit. They probably will let him have what he wants of Poland, but will see that he loses his power in Germany."

Here is what the men think: J. B. Walker, butcher: "I feel they are just messing around. There may be a strategic reason for holding out but I believe they are somewhat reluctant about diving into another war before they have recovered from the last one."

Ralph Davis, groceryman: "I think England and France are guilty of a 'colossal sell-out.' I believe the two powers will give Hitler what he wants in order to terminate fighting. The military operations of England and France look to me as 'playing around.'"

C. N. Nesbit, deliveryman, says, "I am glad they are in. They can beat Hitler."

C. D. Poe, a railway postal clerk: "England and France are a little slow."

H. M. King, a wholesale clothing salesman, of Bremen, Ga.: "England and France are smart. They are taking a far-sighted view. They plan to blockade Germany, starve them out. They are in this war for a showdown."

W. H. Kelley, insurance salesman: "This is not a new war. They are just finishing what they

EDUCATOR DEFENDS ACCREDITING BOARD

J. M. Starr, Newnan, Cites High Standards Set for Schools.

Special to THE CONSTITUTION. NEWNAN, Ga., Sept. 7.—Explaining action of the state accrediting commission in dropping 58 high schools from the accredited list because of failure to run 175 days last year, J. M. Starr, Coweta school superintendent and member of the board, said today that maintenance of rigid standards set up in the interest of high school students had forced the move.

Standards set up by the board are arrived at through careful examination of college requirements, as set forth by college members, matched with high school findings reported by those members who represent public schools, he explained.

Not associated with state government in any way, the accrediting commission is composed of 10 members who serve voluntarily and without pay. Four members are elected by the Association of Georgia Colleges, of which all Georgia colleges except one are members; four are elected by the Georgia High School Association, made up of more than 400 accredited schools; one is named to represent the university board of regents, and one to represent the public schools of the state at large.

Accepted minimum for length of operation of accredited high schools has long been 175 days, Mr. Starr said, and the requirement is the No. 1 standard held by the 10-man board.

FBI SEIZES SUSPECT IN HOLDUP OF BANK

All But $124 of Rockmart Loot Is Recovered by Officers.

ROME, Ga., Sept. 7.—The arrest of a former Lindale textile mill mechanic and the recovery of all except $124 of the $4,523 loot taken by an armed bandit Tuesday from the bank of Rockmart, were announced today by Wayne Listerman, agent in charge of the Atlanta FBI office.

The prisoner, listed as Charles Edgar Cobb, 32, now a candy and hosiery salesman, was arrested at his home here late last night by FBI agents, assisted by Police Chief C. I. Harris, of Rome; Sergeant Bob Jenkins, of the Rome police, and Assistant Chief Bob Sproul, of Rockmart.

Cobb's arrest, it was said, followed investigation of stories that he had attempted to place more than $4,000 in loans. The money, officers said, was found in the safe of a Rome attorney, who had accepted it for loan-making purposes.

Mr. Listerman said Cobb had been identified by a number of persons as the man who held up the Rockmart bank with a revolver and seized all currency in sight under threat of blowing up the building with a two-ounce container of nitro-glycerine he held in his hand. Witnesses, he said, also identified Cobb's automobile as the one in which the bandit fled after the mid-day robbery. The revolver also was recovered, he said.

Appearing before United States Commissioner George Reese, in Rome, Cobb waived hearing and was held for the federal grand jury in default of $10,000 bond. Mr. Listerman said. He was lodged in jail in Carsville pending grand jury action.

England will open many additional sports grounds for militiamen.

CLASSIFYING BEGUN ON BARTER COTTON

Approximately 675,000 Bales To Go to Britain for Rubber.

NEWNAN, Ga., Sept. 7.—(P)—Keen eyes and sensitive fingers of approximately 50 cotton "classers" are determining the quality of staple which Great Britain is to receive from the United States under a huge rubber-for-cotton barter.

Assigned by Manget brothers, of Newnan, to offices in New Orleans, La., and Galveston, Tex., the expert samplers depend almost entirely on "feel" and "judgment." Plans for trading more than 675,000 bales of cotton for British rubber were developed before the outbreak of the European war.

W. B. Davis, of Manget brothers, said the six-month classification job was begun late last week, under a federal contract. The Manget brothers bid 20 cents a bale for grading where the lint is shipped from its present warehouse location; 25 cents a bale where it is necessary to reconcentrate the cotton.

Washington sources said the European war might imperil the barter deal, but Davis said "so far" there had been no indication of contract withdrawal. The agricultural marketing service supervises the classification work.

China shipped over $500,000 worth of firecrackers to the United States last year.

Will America Stay Out of the War?

War in Europe confronts the American people with momentous questions.

Should we sell food supplies to Britain and France? Should we sell them airplanes and other war material? Should we send our Army and Navy abroad to fight on the side of our former allies?

Or should the United States refuse to take sides and remain neutral in every possible way?

These are some of the multitude of questions Americans are asking themselves today. In order to make the thinking of everyday Americans available to government officials, representatives, leaders of public opinion and to the general public, the American Institute of Public Opinion will conduct continuous nation-wide surveys on the issues raised by events in Europe. The Institute will use the same scientific techniques for measuring public opinion which it has used in forecasting numerous state and national elections and in reporting important domestic issues.*

A technique never possible in 1914—sampling of public opinion—will show trends of opinion in the United States, measure the impact of new European moves and keep the American people informed of their own aggregate verdicts.

Forty-eight hours before the German invasion of Poland the American Institute of Public Opinion (Gallup Poll) took steps to prepare for an immediate check of U. S. reactions in case of war.

Special ballots were sent to a nation-wide staff of field investigators stationed in more than 700 selected areas, with instructions to begin interviewing only in case of war.

Now for the first time in history—as replies are being collected and tabulated—it will be possible to report the objective news of America's feelings.

The Institute's nation-wide surveys are made possible by a group of 95 leading American newspapers of all shades of editorial policy. As one of these newspapers The Constitution will publish the full public opinion news service of the Gallup Poll.

Watch for reports SUNDAY of America's attitude toward a referendum of the people prior to a declaration of war.

NAZIS CLAIM ARMIES CRUSHING POLAND IN 3 HUGE VISES

BERLIN JUBILANT OVER REPORT FOES ARE CRUMBLING

Warsaw Radio Silenced; Nazis 20 Miles Away; Polish General Caught; Reich Tallies Its Gains.

By LOUIS F. LOCHNER.
BERLIN, Sept. 7.—(AP)—A spirit of victory was in the air in Berlin tonight as the result of German army reports of sweeping gains against a crumbling Polish adversary.

German armies had clamped Polish forces in three great vises, one of which was reported inexorably clamping down on Warsaw with the main jaw of the advance only 20 miles from the capital's northern limit.

Official reports said the army of Adolf Hitler was converging from three sides upon the city of Poznan, a city of 275,000 population and farthest west of any Polish-held territory. The towns of Wargowice, 28 miles northeast, and Obornik, 18 miles north of Poznan, had been captured, as had the town of Koxmin, 43 miles south. To the west of Poznan the Germans also were declared to be progressing.

In the advance on Lodz, 80 miles southwest of Warsaw, the Germans were reported to have captured the town of Rawa-Mazowieck.

Field Marshal Hermann Wilhelm Goering told his air force: "Mastery of the air in the east is yours. No enemy plane was able to touch the defense of German air space."

Even the Westerplatte, the tiny Polish munitions station in Danzig harbor, had fallen after six days of assault.

Warsaw Radio Silent.
(No direct word has been heard from Warsaw since 12:25 p. m. Wednesday—6:25 a. m., eastern standard time—when it was reported the Poles were "fighting like lions" 30 miles north of Warsaw to save their capital.)

(It was believed that the Poznan and Warsaw radio stations had been abandoned. Those at Krakow and Katowice have been taken by the Germans.)

(Budapest reported that a broadcast from Lwow, the only remaining Polish station, in southeastern Poland about 125 miles from Warsaw, today appealed to the population to "resist the new march of barbarism and anti-Christianity in Europe.")

(It referred to Poland as "the bastion against German barbarians seeking to conquer the world in a new pagan crusade.")

The spirit of victory which swept through Berlin tonight was the most buoyant feeling evidenced here since Reichsfuehrer Hitler on September 1 gave his order: "Meet force with force!"

Berlin Takes Stock.
The buoyancy was based on three developments which Germans insisted had been established:

1. The efficiency of the German war machine in its relentless drive into the very heart of Poland;
2. The reported arrival of the liner Bremen in New York, it is beyond the reach of belligerents (still not borne out by reports from any place but Berlin);
3. Berlin's insistence that there had been no actual acts of war on the western front.

No one in authority will commit himself regarding the whereabouts of the Bremen except to say with a proud glint in the eye: "She's safe. She's beyond the reach of captors."

Bremen in Russia?
One hears rumors that she ended her voyage from New York, which she left eight days ago, in some Russian port, and there is speculation that it probably was Murmansk. (Murmansk lies at the head of an estuary of Barents sea, just east of Finland. In 1918, the Allies held Murmansk against the Bolsheviks.)

An explanation of how Germany's relentless drive in Poland apparently had been far less difficult than expected was offered in a German account of how a strong box, taken in the capture of the Polish seventh division, yielded a full set of general staff plans for defense against Germany's powerful army and air force.

The commander of this division was General Goscinski, one of the oldest collaborators of the late Marshal Jozef Pilsudski, of Poland and until 1936 chief of the general staff. Goscinski now is captive in some unrevealed German military prison.

A German authority said that, even after the capture of the valuable defense plan, the Poles did not change their strategy.

The Polish army in the northern part of Pomerania (Polish Corridor) is unable, according to the German view, to obtain any supplies, even food, since Gdynia cannot function as a port and because the German army, which established direct connections between German proper and East Prussia by way of Grudziadz, prevents anything reaching these troops from the south.

Strike at Polish Hearts.
Besides these important military and economic objects, German strategy also seems directed at the capture of cities sentimentally dear to the Poles.

Czestochowa and Krakow are two cases in point. The bombing of Warsaw is another.

The Westerplatte, it was said, possessed no strategic value, but the capitulation of its gallant force greatly heartened the German residents of Danzig.

German elation over the victorious smash into Poland was shown in one case in Marshal Goering's "order of the day" to the air force:

"You played an exceptional part in the advance of the German army by your faithful co-operation and quick, determined readiness to assume your share of the risks. You have a right to be proud of your success."

Boys, Girls Finish Harvest.
Further putting the nation on a war efficiency basis, 150,000 boys and girls were put to work in the area of Brandenburg alone to bring in the last left-overs of the harvest which had been practically cleaned up when the crisis started August 15.

In Silesia, an Associated Press correspondent was told during his first visit to the Silesia front Tuesday, 10 battalions of labor service men have been put to work repairing damage done by retreating Poles and the harvesting of remaining crops.

A special commissariat was appointed for forestry and forestry products.

The postal ministry announced that all telegram, telephone and mail communications and money transfers have been refused to France, Great Britain, Poland, all French and British colonies, protectorates and overseas possessions, British Dominions and British India.

Private telegrams to neutral countries now are accepted only at the sender's risk.

Warsaw Besieged By German Forces

French Gird for Big Push Along 100 Miles of Northern Frontier.

Out of the fifth day of the war of ideologies on the western front came two very brief communiqués from the French war ministry.

Communique No. 7 read: "On the front there is marked activity on both sides."

Western Front
Communique No. 8 read: "On the front between the Rhine and the Moselle the enemy is being reinforced in front of us. Observers report the arrival of new forces coming from the interior of Germany."

The reference to the front between the Moselle and the Rhine indicates that the main French offensive will take place in the northern 100 miles of the Franco-German frontier, where there is a varying distance between the Maginot and Siegfried lines. At points the distance between the two fortifications is as great as 12 miles. The actual border as a general rule runs about in the center of this 12-mile strip.

This 100 miles of frontier in an east-west direction between Siek, at the entrance of the Moselle valley on the north, to Lauterbourg, at the point where the French border meets the Rhine river. South of Lauterbourg to Basle, on the Swiss border, there has been no indications of fighting. This area is heavily fortified by permanent fortifications in the Siegfried line. The only gap lies at the very southern tip of the line known as the Burgundy gate, through which some observers expect France to attempt to crash and create a line through southern Germany and what some term as friendly "Austrian" territory.

Indications that a big battle is about to be waged along the northern sector came when civilian populations at Metz, opposite the Saar, and Lauterbourg, and as far south as Strasbourg, were evacuated and moved back to Nancy.

While the French have not penetrated the main Siegfried line, the clearing out of advance pillboxes and machine gun nests as well as the silencing of a German fort opposite Saarlautern, on Wednesday, indicate a big push southeast of Metz in a salient where the French yesterday took the greater part of Karlsbrunn forest. The forest was studded with pill boxes and miniature forts.

The salient was driven into German territory in the vicinity of Saarlautern. Reports were received that the British troops which arrived in France on Wednesday have been rushed up to this salient to participate in the push into Germany.

The French interpreted the arrival of German reinforcements to mean, at least in part, the accomplishment of the effort to force Hitler to remove some forces from Poland.

CASH-CARRY SALE OF ARMS FAVORED

Cox Among Legislators Supporting Plan, But That's 'the Limit.'

WASHINGTON, Sept. 7.—(AP)—Cash-and-carry sale of arms to Europe's warring nations appeared tonight to have gained additional support since congress adjourned in August without making any change in the neutrality act.

Much sentiment along this line was disclosed in a survey of congress members here and at their homes, after it was learned that President Roosevelt was conferring with congressional leaders on the possibility of calling a special session to revise the neutrality act.

However, the survey also indicated that there was still sharp division among the legislators and that any attempt by the administration to repeal the present mandatory arms embargo would meet bitter, bi-partisan opposition.

A number of house members who voted against outright repeal of the embargo section at the last session indicated they now favored repeal or some revision.

"I favor repeal of the embargo provisions and adoption of the cash-and-carry plan," said Representative Cox, Democrat, Georgia, "but that represents the limit that I am willing to go."

Speaker Bankhead at his Jasper, Ala., home, counseled a delay of two or more weeks in calling the special session to "allow sentiment in his country to crystallize" and to give members of congress more time to study the operation of the present law.

At the request of Ambassador Kennedy.

They were dug in strongly behind modern fortifications. Machine guns were placed well and the defenders had plenty of ammunition and food.

At least two frontal attacks by German infantry were made while I watched the struggle. Both times machine guns chattered, killing 50 Germans in one charge, according to reports.

Caught in Cross-Fire.
It seemed that the German officers could not find out where the machine guns were planted and many of the attackers were caught in withering cross-fire.

Failing to break down the Poles' resistance in attacks by sea and land, the Germans took to the air on Saturday when 22 Nazi bombers began unloading bombs on the fort.

That exposed the Poles to a double peril, because they had large stores of ammunition on the surface. The bombs exploded a few of these stores but the Poles clung to their position, against fire from within and above.

Hour after hour the Germans bombarded. They even used land artillery, finally had succeeded, but every time the Germans thought they had silenced resistance the machine guns started again.

The advice from Berlin today indicated that the German bombardment finally had succeeded. The official announcement in Berlin said the Germans occupied the battered fort after the surviving Poles surrendered.

So far as can be learned the Poles still hold Gdynia, Poland's only port on the Baltic, lying just west of Danzig, but it was isolated by Germany's land and naval forces.

Heroes of Poles' Alamo Surrender

By GEORGE E. KIDD.
United Press Staff Correspondent.
RIGA, Latvia, Sept. 7.—A band of Polish soldiers who for six days fought a "battle of the Alamo" under constant German siege, today surrendered Westerplatte fortress in Danzig harbor where the first shot of the European war was fired, according to announcement in Berlin.

For four days, beginning early last Friday, I watched the Poles—somewhere between 70 and 200 men—beat off attacks by land, sea and air.

In the first attempt to take the Westerplatte fortress by storm 50 Germans were reported to have been killed by withering machine gun fire.

Withstand Ship's Guns.
The German naval training ship in Danzig harbor tried to blast the Poles out with her biggest guns. A fleet of 22 Nazi planes dropped at least 50 bombs on the old fortress. Both attacks failed.

Then, word came out of Berlin today that the defenders of Westerplatte had surrendered at 10:20 a. m.

The Berlin account of the surrender said that early this morning landing parties from the training ship Schleswig-Holstein, heavily supported by land guns, attacked the fortress.

At the same time German troops launched an attack by land and about 9:30 a. m. a white flag appeared over the fort.

An hour later the commandant of the "suicide battalion" accompanied by a group of soldiers presented himself at the German lines and formally surrendered to the commander of the German storm troops and the captain of the Schleswig-Holstein.

How many of the "suicide battalion" remained alive when the Germans walked in was not revealed.

SOLONS WANTING SPECIAL SESSION TO PREVENT WAR

Certain Members Would Have Congress Continue for Purpose of Insuring U. S. Neutrality.

By GLADSTONE WILLIAMS, Staff Correspondent.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 7.—There is a growing feeling here that if congress is called back into special session, it may be a matter of weeks before the call is issued by the President.

No immediate need exists for the convening of the legislative branch of the government, certain officials argue, even though the administration is known to desire revision of the present "so-called" neutrality laws, with a repeal of the mandatory embargo against the sale and shipment of arms and ammunition to belligerent nations. There are members of congress, however, who are insisting that both the senate and house should be convened immediately and that they should stay in session to see that no steps are taken which might involve this country in the European conflict. Another activity in which a special session might indulge, these same members believe, is the enactment of laws to curb profiteering.

Adjournment Question. Unfortunately from the point of view of New Deal administrationists, the activities of congress cannot be curbed once it has been convened even though that body may curb profiteers. Neither is there any way of compelling congress to adjourn, unless there is disagreement between the two houses with respect to a time for adjournment, in which case the President is empowered to adjourn them. "He (the President)," the constitution says, may, on extraordinary occasions, convene both houses, or either of them, and in cases of disagreement between them, with respect to the time of adjournment, he may adjourn them to such time as he shall think proper."

If and when the congress is called back, a lengthy debate on the foreign situation and the foreign relations of this country probably would follow immediately that body is convened. Such a debate might not jibe with administration views on world affairs.

With an intense desire on the part of America generally not to become involved in the European war, there is no telling what measures designed to prevent participation of this nation in the conflict may be introduced and supported, irrespective of the desires of the administration.

Neutrality Pledge. President Roosevelt has declared that he will do his utmost to keep this country "neutral"—that is to keep it from taking part in the war. But with congress on his hands, talking all sorts of gibberish about neutrality and belligerents, he might find the job too tough for him.

On the other hand, even if neutrality revision was not anxiously awaited, the return of congress at this time may be necessary to do something about profiteering in foodstuffs and other necessities. Already there has been wide buying of supplies on the theory that prices will go up—which in itself tends to make them go up. And already prices of some commodities have advanced considerably. The Department of Justice is now studying the problem of additional laws to prevent war profiteering. Only congress can enact them.

Representative Louis Ludlow, Democrat, of Indiana, says that if a special session is called he will renew his efforts to put through his proposed constitutional amendment for a popular referendum on the question of taking this country into war with another nation. The administration has been strongly opposed to the Ludlow proposition and worked hard to block it in the last session. Mr. Ludlow had begun the circulation of a petition in the house before congress adjourned this summer to bring the resolution to the floor for a vote. He had obtained 48 signatures. Such a petition to be effective must be signed by a majority of the house members, 218.

duration of the emergency and issuing regulations under the neutrality laws to permit the granting of short-term credits to belligerents.

All along, Mr. Roosevelt had said that if war broke out in Europe he would call a special session to revise the neutrality act and, in particular, to repeal the embargo on arms shipments to belligerent nations required by that law.

Although opposed to the embargo on the ground that true neutrality involves opening American markets to all warring nations impartially, Mr. Roosevelt put the arms ban into effect by proclamation on Tuesday. In addition to its repeal, he wants legislation requiring that belligerents pay cash for their purchases here and take title to them before they are shipped.

Would Aid Allies. In actual effect, all agree, such a system would throw American markets wide open to Great Britain and her allies almost exclusively. The British fleet, already blockading Germany, would, it is predicted, see to it that the Reich made, few if any, purchases here.

Besides his statement on the special session, Early revealed that "kickbacks" and complaints had been received as the result of price advances in certain lines. These, he said, were dispatched to Attorney General Murphy and Secretary Wallace.

Wallace said after a cabinet meeting, however, that while there were some instances of suspected profiteering, and some prices had risen, the price level for the most part was lower than it was from two to five years ago. Middlemen, he said, were ready to "co-operate" against any profiteering.

Consumer Demand. Wallace attributed some price rises and temporary depletion of retailers' shelves to a consumer demand prompted by recollection of a similar situation before the World War.

At the agricultural department, officials made known that they were looking into the sugar situation with a view to action to check advancing prices if such a step were considered warranted. Marketing quotas could be increased, they said.

The cabinet met in the afternoon, instead of tomorrow, its regular meeting time, because Mr. Roosevelt is planning a week-end trip to Hyde Park. Meeting with it were Paul V. McNutt, federal security administrator, Jesse H. Jones, loan administrator, and John M. Carmody, the works administrator. They will continue to attend, it was announced, so long as the emergency continues.

Loans to Belligerents. The regulation permitting certain loans to belligerents was announced by Secretary Hull. While the neutrality act bars such loans, it gives the President discretionary power to permit short-term credits such as are used for ordinary transactions in time of peace. Under this authority, Mr. Roosevelt made an exception of "ordinary commercial credits and short-time obligations in aid of legal transactions and of a character customarily used in normal peace-time commercial transactions." He authorized Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau to administer the provision.

The army and navy increased the tempo of their recruiting drives in view of the demands for men to take part in the new "neutrality patrol," to bring warship crews to full peace-time strength, to increase the Panama Canal garrison, and to carry out other programs resulting from the war. Five thousand new sailors are to be enlisted quickly, while the army has accelerated its program of recruiting nearly 115,000 men.

THE BEST LOAN RISKS ARE THE WORKINGMEN, SAYS FINANCIAL MAN

WILSON KEMP

Here I am, Mr. Kemp, with a new question. Which class of borrowers make the best risks? Are they married or single? And, at what age? Is that asking too much of you today?

"Not at all, Redins. If it's facts and figures you want I'll give them to you. First, let me make it plain that a workingman is the best risk. He's the man who feels he can repay a loan before he borrows. He doesn't borrow more at one time than he has special need for. That's why such a personal loan company as the 'Industrial' will loan him

$50 to $1,000 at Once

"The Industrial Loan & Security Co. know that Workingmen are safer than business houses. Their failure to pay debts would be a sad reflection on themselves. So they borrow to pay off old debts, and to keep up the family name in the community. With business it is, Oh, just another firm that failed. There is no reflection on the principals of the business, as with the head of a household."

"Most of the borrowers are married. They borrow when children come into the world, and at school age, when their financial burdens are heaviest."

"The average age of the borrower is from 30 to 36—the time when family expenses are highest. Growing children, a larger family, more clothing, increased rental, illness, doctor bills, etc., are some of the reasons for need of ready cash."

"The Industrial Loan people are keenly alive to the fact that working people make the best risks, and unhesitatingly grant a loan from $50 up according to their needs and responsibility."

"And, Redins, explain that the loan is made without unnecessary red tape, in secrecy, at low rates, on easy monthly terms and from six months up to two years to repay. On that basis all in need of money are invited to visit the Industrial Loan office."

This is an actual interview with Mr. Kemp by J. A. Redins, writer on financial subjects, and forms one of a series of advice of the Industrial Loan & Security Co., 221 Grant Building, of which Mr. Kemp is vice president in charge of loans. Call on him.

When Women Get Together They Usually Talk About Their Men

Amiability Plays Important Part In Marriage

By Caroline Chatfield.

As is their custom a couple of young matrons were having a heart-to-heart talk on the subject of husbands. "You know," said one of them, "every man expects his wife to compromise or give in completely on how they spend their evenings. It never occurs to a man that his wife might be entitled to say what they'll do or where they'll go any night in the week."

"Of course, if I ask A. to do something special with me he's perfectly agreeable, says 'Sure, it's okay by me. But before we have started I realize that his heart isn't in it, that he's not enjoying himself and I am always sorry I made the suggestion. In other words, he's perfectly accommodating but non-participating. There's no fun in doing anything he doesn't suggest."

At this juncture one of the husbands who had been overhearing the conversation came in. "Certainly a man expects his wife to compromise and why not? You women have had the entire day to yourselves to do exactly what you want to do, while we've been doing what had to be done. Why shouldn't you have a thought for our pleasure and be glad to go where we want to go or stay home as the spirit moves us. We've been working for you all day. It's not too much to expect you to play the way we want to play when night comes."

More than this, the average man expects his wife to have divine sympathy with him in the stress and strain of his business life, so when he comes in tired and cross, she won't cross top him, nor cry on him, nor bring up any subject that isn't pleasant. He expects her to have such appreciation of the nervous strain he works under that when he tries to relax with high alcoholic content and gets high, she doesn't take it amiss or raise a hue and cry. In the words of a big business boy: "We men have no peace during the day; the public sees to this; and if we have no peace at home we lead a helluva life."

Just for fun ask any man what is the very first thing he wants in a wife. The last mother's son of them will say amiability, or good humor, or good nature, all one and the same. See what the man means? He wants his wife to say okay to anything he suggests and also put her okay on anything he's done. That's masculine definition of amiability. There is your man's point of view and listen ladies: You can't change it. You either take it or leave it.

The wife that doesn't meet expectations usually starts a tussle that takes its toll of her and eventually she stands to lose the most precious thing in her marriage: comradeship with her husband.

Most Women Are Blissfully Unaware Of Gradual Change in Their Figure

By Ida Jean Kain.

You won't believe this story. Nevertheless, it is true. It's about a woman who gained 30 pounds without knowing it! How could such a thing happen? She was a newspaper correspondent with an assignment in the Balkans and for three months she didn't see a mirror or a scale. Her clothes didn't pinch because she was wearing a regulation uniform big enough to fit anybody.

The evening of her return to Paris, she dined with a group of friends—but this is her story and we'll let her tell it. "Something was said about little people and I made a remark which included myself in this category. 'From across the table a woman leaned toward me. 'You don't call yourself little, do you?'

"Well, I... that is, people have always said, I began. "She looked disgusted. 'How much do you weigh?' was her next question. "A hundred pounds. Around a hundred somewhere?" "She sniffed. 'You weigh a hundred and thirty if you weigh an ounce,' she said shortly.

"And it was true! I got on a scale the next day, and I weighed just 130. I had gained it all in three months—in three weeks, for all I know—and I wasn't conscious that I'd taken on a pound. Maybe that couldn't happen to any right-minded person, but it happened to me."

It's not very often that a woman gets separated from her mirror, but a good many look into the mirror every day without seeing themselves as they really are. We are very prone to think of ourselves as we were when we were younger and we don't really see the changes which gradually come about.

In the book "Designing Women" the authors made a suggestion which will help any woman to get a clearer picture of herself. This is it: Suppose that you had amnesia, and wanted to write such an accurate description of yourself that your identity could be established from it. You'd sit down before the mirror and really take stock! And there wouldn't be any glossing over of the true facts as to weight, size, carriage, skin, hair and apparent age. As you wrote everything down, it wouldn't be very flattering, would it? It would probably be quite different from your own mental picture of yourself.

The big difference is invariably in a woman's figure. A pound comes on here, and another there, and she goes along blissfully oblivious to the total effect. If you would fix what is wrong with your figure and posture, you would be amazed at the improvement made in your entire appearance. By stimulating the circulation, the skin would be clarified, the eyes would take on more sparkle, and even the hair would shine with new life. By and large, the program by which you attain a perfect figure is as complete a beauty program as can be found.

copper alloys plus silver or amalgam in various fillings, inlays, crowns, bridges and the like, suffer from these painful ulcers, please do not ask me. Possibly the saliva of some persons is a better electrolyte than the saliva of others, and makes a more efficient miniature galvanic battery by its action on the dissimilar metals. Anyway, normal saliva is a fair electrolyte—it need not be particularly acid; nor does the use of alkaline mouth-wash seem to alleviate or correct the trouble in these cases.

Galvanic ulcers may be mistaken for obstinate "canker sores" which they resemble to a degree; the galvanic sores do not heal as readily as canker sores, however, and usually the galvanic ulcers are directly opposite in the path between the dentures which are responsible.

In some cases galvanic sore mouth is mistaken for smoker's stomatitis, medically called leukoplakia. Leukoplakia will be described later.

In any case of galvanic sore mouth the practical question arises, whether to remove the gold or say the amalgam fillings. One or the other metal must be removed and replaced with a metal similar to that present in the mouth. In some cases it is more practical to remove the recently installed gold denture and substitute for it one of the same metal as that composing the fillings present in the teeth. In other cases the amalgam fillings should be removed, replaced with gold like that of the crown, bridge or inlay already installed.

QUESTIONS & ANSWERS
Raw But Good
Opinion regarding use of raw sugar in place of refined white sugar. Friend says a man who works in sugar refinery is horrified at the idea of eating raw sugar, as it is squeezed from the cane under the bare feet of sweating negroes. (M. J. B.)

Answer—The friend of her friend has a vivid imagination. Of course sugar is refined wholly by machinery without human touch from cane to table. If you like raw sugar it is a wholesome food, containing more of the mineral matter of the cane than refined sugar does. The mineral content of raw sugar is no reason for preferring it to refined white sugar, for the difference is insignificant in respect to the amount of mineral matter the body requires daily—and gets in vegetables, milk, cheese, greens particularly.

Quinine
Please give me all the information you can concerning the use of quinine as a home remedy. We have recently moved south and we hear there is some malaria in this district. (Mrs. E. H. C.)

Fee
Would appreciate your suggestion or recommendation of a competent physician specializing in the treatment of diabetes—one whose fee is moderate enough for an ordinary wage earner. (P. B.)

English Actors Leave for Home And War

By Sheila Graham.

HOLLYWOOD, Sept. 7.—News from the Hollywood front. An unconfirmed report has it that Errol Flynn will form a foreign battalion to fight for England. . . . Laurence Olivier says: "I will remain in Hollywood long enough to complete 'Rebecca.' To leave now would be to throw hundreds of people out of work. If, when I have completed the picture, I am needed in England, I will return immediately."

David Niven must report for active service immediately, and production on "Raffles," his first starring picture, has been postponed indefinitely. . . . Super-productions of the caliber of "Gone With the Wind," and "The Wizard of Oz" will not be released abroad until there is certainty that there will be enough people left in the mood for light entertainment.

Ronald Colman, Herbert Marshall, Nigel Bruce are exempt from service—all are well beyond the age limit. . . . Producers are trying to insure their productions in case of delay or expenditures caused by withdrawal of British masculine stars. . . . Brian Aherne wants to return to England and enlist in the Royal Air Force (he has a pilot's license), but Bride Joan Fontaine is begging "Don't." . . . And here's one for the book—Victor McLaglen has offered the entire personnel of his light horse brigade, his private air force and his unit of women on horseback to the local British consuls!

Bette Davis created a minor sensation when she recently visited the theater in Cape Cod in which she started her acting days—as an usherette. . . . Not only does Sonja Henie roller-skate in her next picture—"Everything Happens at Night"—and, of course, she ice-skates—but she will sing as well. And act—maybe. They ought to change the picture title to "Everything Can Happen in Hollywood." . . . Irene Dunne entered with her dentist-husband for the golf tournament in Del Monte. (Nice to hear of such a peaceful pursuit at this troubled time.) . . . Says Basil Rathbone—"I will not be giving any more parties—if I can help it." He means if wife Ouida can help it.

It was funny to watch the crowd streaming out of the theater after the swank premiere of "The Women." Newsboys were yelling "War!" But the fans were much too busy yelling for their favorite stars to hear—or care. And the said stars were much too busy posing for pictures to give any thought to a war that will retard and perhaps destroy existing civilization. . . . Mary Pickford and Lillian Gish looked like fragile dolls as arm-in-arm they trailed for their car.

Marlene Dietrich has gone in for the quiet life. She is looking for a small house that must be minus swimming pool and tennis court. Next time I see Marlene, I must remember to ask her whether or she has received back from the United States income tax authorities the $250,000 worth of jewels they recently took from her. . . . Too bad about the current labor troubles affecting actors of all classes. A strike usually means that only the little people suffer. And in Hollywood it would be the extras and the bit players who would lose out. . . . The reason for Orson Welles' unpopularity in Hollywood is that he refuses to bend the knee to the local bigwigs. I'm all for you, Orson.

MY DAY Uncertainty of Future Worries the Young

By Eleanor Roosevelt.

HYDE PARK.—Johnny and Anne motored back to Boston on Monday so he could go to work on Tuesday. Jimmy left on Monday night, motoring back to Newark airport to start back to California, feeling that he must get his work all up to date. I sense in all these young people a feeling of uncertainty about the future. A sense for the first time that whatever they have to do must be done now, quickly, for fear that something will interrupt the even tenor of life's ways. They join with you in feeling that this country should do all within its power to keep out of war, but they have no very clearly defined idea of what is going to happen. They have set themselves to prepare for uncertainties, for anything may happen, and they must be ready for it.

We were discussing the 1914 psychology and the psychology of today, and I think people are much more aware of what war will mean from the economic standpoint as well as the military. We have had a good many years of preparation watching Spain and China, and the radio is a more vivid medium of information than the newspapers were in 1914. I think it has made us more realistic, more reluctant to see war anywhere in the world, but I also think it is making out for ourselves what the position of our country should be.

One of my young cousins has just sent me a rather interesting letter about a project which is being tried in New York city. I will tell you about it in the words of her letter: "There has been for years the need of a theater in the Broadway district where the young player can play a variety of parts. 'Theatregrate' has taken the 'Little Theatre' and has engaged an acting company of 11. Nine of these are between the ages of 20 and 30, the other two being older men. A 35-week season is planned, opening in October, and the schedule calls for four or five plays. After the first year, a paying apprentice group will be added. The apprentices will be chosen from the most likely prospects of the leading schools in the country and contacts are already being made with dramatic schools in key cities, with this in view. The apprentices will be followed to take walk-ons and to assist in the technical work. As it is not the plan of 'Theatregrate' to keep the original 11 permanently, the best of the apprentices will automatically find places in the group and it is felt that the original 11 will find other jobs in the theater."

This is a new departure for the theater and, I feel, along very wise lines, so I shall watch what they do with great interest.

We intended to motor over to Westbrook, Conn., yesterday to picnic with our friends, Miss Lape and Miss Reed, but we woke to heavy rain and stayed home. A friend dropped in on us instead, which is proof that in these days the unexpected always happens!

For the remainder of the summer this lovely miss, when giving herself a manicure, will use the new pink cloud nail enamel, which is a refreshing change from the dark hues worn all summer.

Pink Cloud Nail Enamel "Sets Off" Sun-Kissed Hand

By LILLIAN MAE.

How often have you looked at a stream of fleecy clouds just after the sun was peeping behind them and marveled at the color effect! Well, that's just the tone of one of our manufacturers of beauty-for-the-hands aids has captured for use just now when our hands are well weathered, whether we would or not, from summer's sun.

This peachy white tint can be as deceptive as its name. In some lights it's as fragile looking as a pink tea-cup; in others it is as bold and sensational as white coral jewelry on sun-kissed shins. How lovely it looks with white slacks and white rimmed dark glasses! It's equally as intriguing worn with a white cotton dress for afternoon tea.

It's such a refreshing change from the dark hues worn all summer. And you can rest assured that it will call attention to your hands like nothing you've used in a long, long time. Your tan will stand out as distinctly different, against the pink cloud that your nails will become.

It's really more white than peach, and more peach than white. Sounds crazy and muddled up, doesn't it? So you'd better try it for yourself and then you'll know what I mean by the description. And right now is the time to put it to the test—now while summer is still on us, though the calendar tells us it's fall. This new tint will do a great deal for you in the way of lifting your spirits and

Every Player Should Try Vienna Coup

By Harold Sharpsteen.

It's not what you play, but the way you play it that counts in bridge, for knowledge of playing principles rather than the exact cards involved often marks the dividing line between ordinary and expert methods of attack.

Truly great bridge players do not claim to be able to draw rabbits out of a hat. It is often simply a matter of recognizing particular types of plays, plus the courage to try for them while timid souls tamely pass them up and follow the least line of resistance.

The present-day Vienna coup, with dummy exposed, is really a simple play. Once you become acquainted with it, it is an excellent illustration of principle versus actual cards held in a deal. It is worth going set a couple of tricks, just to see how the play operates, and it may give you courage to do better the next attempt.

With a suit of sufficient length to execute a possible squeeze, the clue to a Vienna coup is, in its simplest form, Q X X opposite A X X.

There are two methods of making both of these honors good.

Lead low away from North's Ace, playing East to hold the king. If East plays the king, South's Queen is promoted to a winner. If East holds the king and refuses to play it, South's queen wins on the first lead. This is a simple indirect finesse, for in this case, declarer apparently does not care if East makes the king, so long as declarer cashes the ace and queen.

But suppose declarer can not afford to give East the king. Then it is an entirely different story. With sufficient length to project a squeeze against East, declarer deliberately leads low away from his own queen, playing North's ace on the first trick, thereby establishing East's king as a winner, provided declarer does not take it, or some equally valuable winner, away from him, later on in the play.

Here, at trick nine, South leads the Diamond 5, discarding a spade from North's hand and East is unable to make a discard that will not prevent declarer from taking the remaining tricks. A spade or heart discard is disastrous to East because of declarer's Vienna coup earlier in the play which operated a simple two-suit squeeze at this crucial point.

Q. What foods are rich sources of vitamin A?

A. Milk, butter, cheese, eggs, liver, green leafy vegetables and other vegetables of green or yellow color.

Q. If silk stockings are stored for a long time, will the silk disintegrate?

A. They should not be stored for more than a year, and in order to keep the silk alive, they should be washed occasionally.

Q. What is processed or renovated butter?

A. It is usually farm butter that has been sold to a wholesaler or processor. The butter is melted and air is blown through it to carry off bad flavors and odors. ## Frock and Cape Outfit for Tiny Tots

By Lillian Mae.

Style comes in small doses too! This little mite looks snappy as she steps off to a busy day. Her cape of bright-colored flannel or wool has an engaging military swing. A simple to make practical garment for warding off chilly fall winds. As for the dainty frock, you may call it in the buttoned-front style that's so easy for mother to sew and wash, and easy for a tiny girl to fasten up all by herself too. Or seam up the front and trim it with novelty buttons. Those side-and-back skirt panels show off dashing in bias-cut if you use a checked or plaid fabric. Ruffles add gay charm to this useful, jaunty Lillian Mae outfit, pattern 4065.

Pattern 4065 is available in children's sizes, 4, 6, 8, 10 and 12. Size 6 cape, takes 1 1/4 yards 54-inch fabric; dress, 2 1/8 yards 35-inch fabric and 1 1/8 yards ruffling.

Trio of Brides-Elect Receive Handsome Heirlooms as Gifts

By Sally Forth.

A VERITABLE avalanche of presents accompanies the wedding preparations of a trio of prominent brides-elect, including Isabel Daniel, of Eastman; Virginia Hodgson, of Athens, and Anita Murray, of Marietta. When Isabel becomes the bride of Bassford Field, of Durham, N. C., and Marietta, next Thursday afternoon she will carry a prayer-book numbered among prized possessions in her family since 1790! The book was given her recently by her father, Wright Daniel, of Eastman.

The announcement made today of the wedding plans and personnel of Isabel and her fiancé enlists the interest of a wide circle of friends. Thursday's bride will also carry an exquisite handkerchief loaned her by the groom-elect's mother, Mrs. Horace Field, who carried it in her wedding. An interesting history surrounds the scrap of lace, which was a gift to Mrs. Field's family from the family of Austria's erstwhile court musician.

Sally was intrigued by the tiny shoe given the couple by Bassford's aunt, Mrs. Albert Triggs. The shoe was worn by the groom-elect during his infancy, and was thrown with a handful of rice at the wedding of Mr. and Mrs. Triggs. The little garment was so prized by Mrs. Triggs that she sent it to New York and had it bronzed and lettered, "Albert and Edith," with the date of her marriage. Recently the names, "Isabel and Bassford, September 14," were added.

Other handsome gifts received by the bride-elect include a Chelsea English dinner set, a rosewood teapot, a coin silver teapot of the vintage of 1812, and an escriptoire sent from Vienna in 1808.

The Community House at Eastman will form the setting on September 14 for Isabel and Bassford's marriage, when Miss Lucy Bailey, of Marietta, who taught the bride-elect's mother during her school days, will present a musical program.

Billy Daniel and Dan O'Callahan will be ushers, and Dudley Field, of Montgomery, Ala., will be his brother's best man.

Isabel has selected Mrs. Byrd Daniel, of Statesboro, for her matron of honor, and her ribbon bearers include Misses Rachel Patterson, of Knoxville, Tenn., and Panka and Marian Knox, of Milledgeville.

The bride-elect's parents, the Wright Daniels, of Eastman, will be hosts at a reception following the ceremony, after which the newlyweds will journey to Savannah, from whence they sail for Europe.

Miss Florence Estelle Stevenson Weds Dr. Needham B. Bateman

JENDERSONVILLE, N. C., Sept. 7.—The marriage of Miss Florence Estelle Stevenson, daughter of Mrs. Estelle Meyers Stevenson, to Dr. Needham Bryant Bateman was solemnized on September 4 at the First Presbyterian church. Rev. Wilburn S. Smith performed the ceremony and Miss Kate Dodson presented a program of music.

The altar of the church was banked with palms and floor baskets filled with white gladioli and dahlias. Candelabra holding burning tapers completed the decorations. Croomsmen were Willis Hawkins, of Atlanta, W. H. Bateman and Gregory Bateman, of Sandersville, brothers of the groom. Mrs. Gordon Luke, of Charleston, S. C., was matron of honor. She was gowned in powder blue crepe with which she wore harmonizing accessories. She carried a bouquet of pastel-colored gladioli. Miss Rosemary Peck was maid of honor. She wore rose taffeta with matching pan-cake hat. Her bouquet was pastel-colored flowers. The bridesmaids were Miss Kitty Mason, of Birmingham, cousin of the bride; and Miss Ellen McElroy, of Orlando, Fla. They wore dresses designed like that worn by the maid of honor, the former wearing gold and the latter green.

The bride entered with her brother, Frederick Stevenson, by whom she was given in marriage. They were met at the altar by the groom and his best man, Dr. C. Raymond Arp, of Atlanta. She was gowned in white satin which featured a lace hoop skirt and fashioned redingote style. A finger-tip veil of illusion tulle was caught to her hair by a coronet of orange blossoms. Her only ornament was a string of pearls, a gift of the groom. She carried a bouquet of white gladioli and valley lilies.

CRIME TEARS ON

Stone Finds a Small Dart, the Size Of an Awl Blade in Harvey's Skull

By CAROLYN WELLS.

PRECEDING SYNOPSIS.
At a cocktail party in Amy Crosby's home in Manhattan, Craig Madison, an architect, introduces himself to Yvette Verne, a film star, after he overhears her quarreling with Billy Gomez, a man unknown to him. He then invites her to spend the week end at the estate of his uncle, Harley Madison, in New Plymouth, Long Island, who is regarded as an eccentric philanthropist. Craig and his cousin, Tom Shelton, both orphans, were brought up by Harley, a widower, who lives with his sister, Cornelia, Hetty, a housekeeper, and a maid, and Yvette Ames, his secretary. Harley's plan is to improve New Plymouth out of a common fund, is suddenly opposed by men who want to be glorified by their donations. At the week-end party Yvette captivates everybody, especially Harley, much to the annoyance of Anita Boyce, a widow, who hopes to marry him. The next morning Hetty tells Cornelia she saw Yvette meet a man in the Ivy Arbour at 3 a. m. Yvette denies this. Aggie, a servant, questioned by Tom, admits she, too, saw Yvette, or a woman wearing Yvette's favored coat, in the arbour threatening a letter he announces his engagement to Yvette. Harley, who intended to leave half of the estate to the village improvement committee, and say's he'll make a new one, providing for the actress. Next morning Harley is found dead, and Yvette is called a famous detective. While the physicians are consulting, Cornelia tells Stone the Madison pearls which she told Yvette, she found give her on her wedding day, are missing. Yvette is in New York. NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY:

INSTALLMENT XVII.

"Only a more thorough examination." Fenn looked amazed and not very pleased, but he made no objection.

Stone went over to the bed, and taking the head of the dead man in his hands, moved it a very little so that the back of the neck was fully exposed. Taking from his pocket a tiny flashlight, he examined the flesh just at the line of haircut. He discovered a tiny spot, an almost imperceptible indentation of the flesh.

He showed it to Fenn, saying, "Have you instruments here?"

"Yes, I have. What is that?"
"The weapon that killed Harley Madison. What you see is the end of a very slender blade or dart, which was driven into the medulla oblongata, and produced cerebral hemorrhage. The natural indrawing tendency of the flesh has nearly drawn it in, out of sight. Can you get it, with pincers or something?"

"I'll have a try at it."
Dr. Fenn, by dint of some slight incisions, managed to grasp the end of the dart with his pincers and drew it out.

It was a metal pin, seemingly, about as big as a small awl blade, and was the color of nickel or silver.

"A diabolical weapon!" exclaimed the medical examiner. "The stab from this dart, had the effect of a stroke of apoplexy. I'll hand it to you, Stone, if you hadn't been here I should have missed it! And old Bascom never would have found it. I doubt if we'd noticed it at the post mortem."

"Oh, of course you would. Now there's the weapon, we must find the criminal."

"Too easy. A film star comes here, gets herself engaged to the old man, has the family pearls given to her, or lent to her. She doesn't want the old man, but she does want the pearls, so she lights out for New York, and, naturally, takes the pearls with her, and I think Miss Madison has seen the last of the pearls and the star."

"I don't see it that way. From some hints I picked up, I think both of those young cousins are in love with the girl, and one of them might have been willing to put Uncle out of the way, in hope of getting the lady."

"That's up our alley. I don't envy you the job. Have you forgotten the hermetically sealed room."

"There's always a way in. I've been up against many kinds of unenterable rooms, but I always found a way in."

"Think it was some member of the family, then?"

"Not yet. I'm leaning toward the Village Fathers. They seem more likely game than this aristocratic family."

"We'd better go down and tell them what we've found." Fenn looked a little sheepish. "What you found, I mean. But—"

"Oh, say you found it. It's no great honor to me."

"All right, and I ought to have found it anyway."

"Does it presuppose a criminal with a fund of medical knowledge?"

"Not quite that," Fenn said; "but a knowledge of anatomy would be necessary."

They went downstairs, and found the group as they had left them.

As gently as possible, Fenn told them of the discovery that had been made and the inevitable conclusion that Harley Madison had been killed while he slept.

A stunned silence followed the news, and then Craig went over and sat by his aunt, "Aunt Cornelia," he said, "this awful blow falls the hardest upon you. I want you to know that my life is dedicated to yours, and I shall watch over you as carefully as Uncle Harley did."

Cornelia clasped his hand, and said, in firm, clear tones: "This crime shall be avenged. Mr. Stone, will you take the case?"

When Assistant District Attorney Sutton arrived at Silver Hill, Wilkins showed him into a reception room.

"I would like to see Miss Madison, if convenient," Sutton said. "And also Dr. Fenn, if he is still here."

Fenn came first, and welcomed his colleague.

"Widespread case," he said, in low tones. "And ramifications and minor mysteries—in face, baffling."

Cornelia came then, and Fenn introduced Sutton and the three sat down.

"We must waste no time," Sutton said, "Miss Madison, do you feel equal to the ordeal of my preliminary questioning, or would you prefer not to be present, and send one or both of your nephews?"

"No," Cornelia told him, "my personal feelings are not to be considered in the work we have before us. My grief and sorrow at my loss, only time can help; but I want, above all things, justice, and if you can find the murderer of my brother and bring him to justice, I shall feel that I have done my duty."

"I understand you have Mr. Stone with you. He will be a powerful assistant."

"What do you do first, Mr. Sutton? I am entirely unversed in these matters."

"I think first of all I should like to call your family and make some general inquiries, and after that, question this one or that one alone."

"Very well, then we must go to a larger rooming house, where you would first find out how anybody could get into my brother's room. I know this house so well, you see, and I know nobody could get in when his hall door was locked."

"A sealed room used to be a great mystery. Miss Madison, but I think Mr. Stone will tell you, that they usually give up their secrets to him. You have guests?"

"Only one, at this moment. Three left this morning."

"They should not have been allowed to go."

"I knew no reason to detain them. You cannot possibly suspect any of my family or guests—or my servants?"

"It is too soon to suspect anybody yet. Let us get the people together."

They went to the living room, where they found Fleming Stone, and the two Madison men, also Everett Ames.

Anita was there, too, and Miss Madison said:

"I have another house guest, Miss Yvette Verne. But she has gone to New York on some errands and will be back later."

"Looking toward a possible motive," Sutton began, "can any of you suggest some one who would have gained financially by Mr. Madison's death?"

As no one else spoke, Ames answered this question.

"On the contrary, Mr. Sutton. Last night before he died, Mr. Madison destroyed his will, meaning to make a new one this morning. Unless his lawyer has a valid will, of some past date, Mr. Madison died intestate. This, I may say, must remove suspicion from the men in the village, who were unfriendly toward him, but for personal reasons."

"Those men must be taken into consideration, of course. But, did they know that he was tearing up his will last night? But that doesn't let them all out, for, as I was Mr. Madison's confidential secretary, I know that one or two of them had serious ill-feeling against him, for reasons outside of money matters."

"That's so. They couldn't have known about his tearing up his will last night. But that doesn't let them all out, for, as I was Mr. Madison's confidential secretary, I know that one or two of them had serious ill-feeling against him, for reasons outside of money matters."

"Those things will be taken up in due course. I want a brief account of last evening's doings. Perhaps you will give it to me, Mrs. Boyce?"

"Me!" Anita fluttered her pretty hands and looked distracted. "Oh, I don't believe I can."

"Try, anyway."

"Oh, well—all right," Anita preened and smiled, until Cornelia wanted to spank her. "Well, you see, we were all in this room—this very room, and Harley—"

Rucker, Burge Homer as Crackers Swamp Pelicans, 13 to 4

COHEN IS SHELLED AS CLYDE SMOLL PITCHES 9-HITTER

Mauldin, Peters, Rubeling Pace Attack With 3 Hits Each.

By JACK TROY.
The New Orleans Pelicans reverted to form last night and the rampant Crackers staged an old-fashioned slugging bee to win the opening game, 13 to 4.

Irked by the thought of three straight losses at New Orleans, the Crackers kept bawling away at Sid Cohen until he took himself out of the game in the fifth. He had allowed eight hits and before Jurisch could get the side out, Cohen was charged with nine runs.

Jurisch lasted only one and one-third innings, the Crackers getting next to him for five hits and four runs. Don Pulford finished strong, but the damage had been done.

With the Knoxville Smokies lowering the colors of the Chicks twice in an afternoon double-header, Manager Paul Richards called upon his ace trouble shooter, Clyde Smoll, to stop the Pelicans. And Smoll, while not in his usual form was tough enough to allow the Pels only nine scattered hits, and so the Crackers closed in on a certain first division berth.

BURGE, RUBELING.
As for getting Cracker runners home, Lester Burge and Al Rubeling were tops. Each drove in four. Rubeling did an unusual thing with the bases loaded and two out in the sixth. He singled to drive in three runs.

The Crackers hit in successive innings. In the third, for example, Mauldin beat out an infield hit. Rucker came up and Cohen threw one of his best southpaw curves and Rucker, a left-handed hitter, drove it over the second tier of signs.

In the fourth Peters walked and Burge came up. Again Cohen threw one of his finest curves and left-handed Burge hit it on a line over the second row of signs. It was very disconcerting.

The Crackers had scored runs in the first and second when they again unloaded in the fifth. Cohen went storming from the box while Jurisch continued to warm up.

PETERS HITS HEAVY.
Rus Peters also did some fancy slugging for the Crackers, hitting two triples and a double. In all, the Crackers collected six extra base hits. They had a total of 14 hits for the night.

At the very start, the Pels were in the ball game. But after the fourth inning, it was no contest. The Pels scored in the first and second and threw a final two-spot at Smoll in the sixth.

AMATEUR CHAMPS LEAVE FOR NATIONAL MEET

Southern League President Trammell Scott congratulates Manager Sargent, of the Fulton Bag nine, upon winning the city amateur baseball tourney held here last week, and wishes the Baggers luck. They leave for Washington, D. C., early this morning. The Bag nine will represent Atlanta and Georgia in the National Amateur Baseball Federation's tourney in the nation's capital. The meet is set for September 9 through 16, with the Atlanta entry playing its first foe tomorrow. Two losses are necessary to eliminate a team from the running.

FULTON LEAVES FOR WASHINGTON

Atlanta Amateur Champions To Play in National Saturday.

By CHARLIE ROBERTS.
Amateur baseball champions from 24 of the nation's larger cities go to Washington, D. C., this week-end to compete for the National Amateur Baseball Federation's largest plum, the national crown. Fulton Bag's nine, winner of the Atlanta tourney completed here this week, left early this morning by bus to represent the city and the state of Georgia.

The Atlanta entry will go into action some time tomorrow against a foe not yet determined.

Clark Griffith, president of the Washington Senators, is chairman of the advisory board of the National Federation which embraces other such dignitaries as Edgar Hoover, Uncle Sam's No. 1 G-man; Walter Johnson, baseball's immortal "Big Train," and the Hon. Frank Murphy.

President Roosevelt is to throw out the first ball to get the meet under way, and Mr. Baseball himself, Babe Ruth, will also appear in the opening day ceremonies.

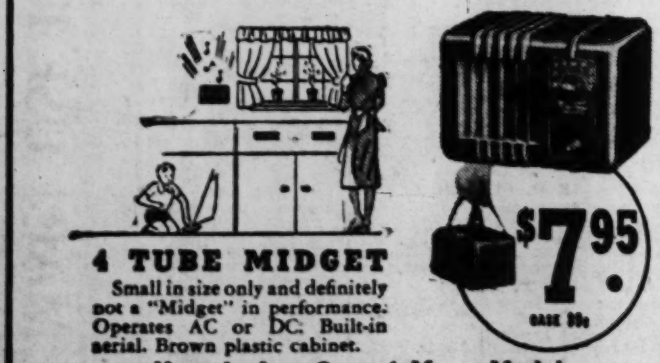

The Fulton Bag ball hawks, after coming through a tough tourney here with but one defeat to besmear their record, are confident of being able to win over the best that other sections of the nation have to offer. With some of the cities' hardest hitters in Hoke Fowler, Jimmy Hewell, Jimmy Hearn, Frank Moody, Sosebee, Bradshaw and Roy Johnson, the Baggers are set to do a lot of blasting at the plate.

In the pitching department the Bag nine will rely on Buster Rantlin, the Atlanta tournament sensation, who is expected to be the team's ace.

In figuring up Alabama's chances to do this and that on peacetime's battlefields where the football is the chief weapon, do not overlook an ace Coach Frank Thomas in a position to play again this year.

And this ace may come in handy when Thomas sits down in the two-handed games against Bob Neyland's Tennessee Vols or Tulane's Green Wave or Tech's scrapping Jackets.

Hayward (Sandy) Sanford is active again, following a season of inactivity caused by a broken leg in practice before the Southern California game.

And just as a matter of record, Sanford has yet to miss a placement kick or after-touchdown goal. Two seasons ago he popped over placements against Tulane and Vanderbilt and added five other points on after-touchdown attempts during the season.

So far as anyone knows, Sanford has never missed a kick. For he came to Alabama with a perfect junior college record.

The big boy, who is bidding for a regular end position on the Tide, is really a whale of a kicker and awful handy to have in reserve.

There are bound to be tight spots on the Tide schedule this coming season and Sanford may be the deciding factor just as he was in '37. Alabama would have lost to Vanderbilt had it not been for Sanford, who made a miraculous kick on a muddy field. And that same year Tulane would have had the edge—except for Sanford.

He has always shown great possibilities as a player as well as a kicker, Sanford has, but Alabama hasn't been able to use him much at end since he has been in school.

This may be his year. Both as a kicker and as a player.

GOULD SPEAKS UP.

Joe Gould, cagey manager of Ted Yarosz, wired yesterday from New York that he is assured a match with Al Hostak next month at Seattle if Yarosz beats Ben Brown here Monday night.

Gould says: "There will be no question as to the winner in Monday night's return battle between Yarosz and Brown. Teddy in greatest shape of career and boxing better than when he held world's middleweight crown. Fans sure to get good break with Dempsey as referee stop if Yarosz wins he is matched with Al Hostak at Seattle next month. The Polish battler is confident that he can regain his crown. Regards, Joe Gould."

Yarosz today is rated a light-heavyweight but he easily can make the weight as a middleweight. But it isn't necessary to do so against Brown. He probably will go into the ring overweight as he did the last time.

It makes no difference to Brown at what weight he must meet Yarosz, for Brown is used to meeting top-notch fighters who have trouble making 160 pounds.

For instance, Gus Lesnevich, whom Brown fought to a virtual standstill, is now considered the second-ranking light-heavy challenger.

SOBEL HURLS CHALLENGE.

Sam Sobel called from Brown's camp at Groover's lake yesterday and issued the following challenge:

"Regardless of what Gould says, if Yarosz has nerve enough to stand still 15 seconds and fight, Brown will knock him right in Gould's lap."

"I am thinking of taking care of Yarosz if he does some of the cute things he did the last time. For instance, I think a waltz band would be appropriate if he insists on hugging and clinching."

"What I'd really like to see," Sobel said, "is for them to draw a line in the ring and the first fighter to back up give his part of the purse to charity. I know it wouldn't be Brown."

Word from the camp yesterday was that Brown had turned loose on his sparring partners and inflicted a lot of damage. Kenny LaSalle was hit so hard and often he admitted he might have been fighting two men.

SMOKIES BEAT CHICKS TWICE; BID FOR PLACE

Abernathy Bats in Winning Run in 7th Inning of Nightcap.

KNOXVILLE, Tenn., Sept. 7.—(AP)—Knoxville's Smokies, hungry for a first division berth in the Southern association, gave Memphis' pennant hopes a severe jolt today by winning both ends of a double-header, 13 to 5 and 4 to 3.

Woody Abernathy's poke into center field in the seventh inning of the nightcap with the satchels loaded and two men out provided transportation for the winning marker. The Chicks had tied it up in their half of the inning when Aubrey Epps whaled the ball over the center field wall to drive in O. Eckhardt ahead of him.

Carl Doyle and Frank Veverka were touched for 15 safeties in the first contest and coupled with four Chick errors, practically made the Smokies a gift of the game. Rip

Puncec, Kukuljevic Upset in 1st Round

Guernsey, Sutter Put Yugoslavian Aces Out of Meet; Marble Wins Easily.

By GAYLE TALBOT.
NEW YORK, Sept. 7.—(AP)—The Yugoslavs had a hard time of it today at Forest Hills, when two of their favorite sons were slammed out of the national tennis championships by a pair of long-winded American youngsters.

Frank Guernsey Jr., the national intercollegiate champion from Orlando, Fla., pulled the biggest upset of the opening day's play by eliminating Franjo Puncec, ace of the Yugoslav team and second seeded foreigner, 6-1, 3-6, 2-6, 6-3, 7-5, in a marathon match that went into almost pitch blackness.

Previously, Ernest Sutter, of New Orleans, a former intercollegiate champ, had given the works to Franjo Kukuljevic, a big, left-handed Yugoslav, by scores of 6-4, 2-6, 3-6, 6-3, 6-3.

Guernsey's victory was marred by a series of foot faults called against Puncec in the closing games of the match. They apparently infuriated the foreigner and he deliberately threw away several critical points as the crowd jeered the foot fault judge.

The unexpected defeat of Puncec, who recently scored a decisive victory over Jack Bromwich, of Australia, left Bobby Riggs with

RUSSELL SHIFTS SOPH FULLBACK TO TACKLE POST

Mercer Mentor Moves Carl Stager From Tailback to Wingback.

MACON, Ga., Sept. 7.—Coach Lake Russell announced yesterday the shifting of one of his many backs to a line post and of another back from tailback to wingback.

In order to bolster his tackle strength Coach Russell pulled 180-pound Ed Cassell, sophomore fullback, into service as a reserve on the right tackle post.

Carl Stager, brilliant soph tailback, was shifted to the number one back station. Stager, stocky broken-field runner, tips the scales at 170.

The changes made yesterday still leave the Bruin squad with 16 candidates for the four backfield posts. The addition of Cassell to the tackle-weak line should help to ease the worries of Coach Russell and his assistants.

The Bears continued their twicedaily workouts under a hot sun. Linemen under Coach Bill Peters

Cards Beat Cubs as Reds Lose; Yankees Defeat Pirates 5 to 2

GABBY CATCHES 1,727TH CONTEST FOR NEW RECORD

But Cards Score 2 in 10th for 4-2 Victory; Pirates Win in 11th.

By The Associated Press.
Manager Gabby Hartnett established an all-time major league record yesterday by catching his 1,727th game, but his Chicago Cubs muffed a chance to contribute to the occasion by losing a 10-inning 4-to-2 decision to the St. Louis Cardinals. Ray Schalk, former Chicago White Sox catcher, set the record of 1,726 games 10 years ago.

Two rookies, Maurice Van Robays and Bob Elliott sparked the Pittsburgh Pirates to an 8-to-7 11-inning victory over the league leading Cincinnati Reds. Van Robays singled Elliott home in the ninth to tie the score and his single in the eleventh with Gamble's fumble sent across the winning tally.

The veteran Carl Hubbell weakened in the ninth inning to let the Reds come from behind and beat the New York Giants, 4 to 3. Held to seven hits in the previous innings, the Bees got four singles in the ninth to score one run and fill the bases before Hub was replaced by Walter Brown. Then Joe Sullivan tapped easily to Brown, but Catcher Harry Daning dropped the throw which would have started a double play at the plate.

Teddy Yarosz Arrives Today

Ben Brown Is Ranked Fifth Middleweight by Ring Magazine.

By THAD HOLT.

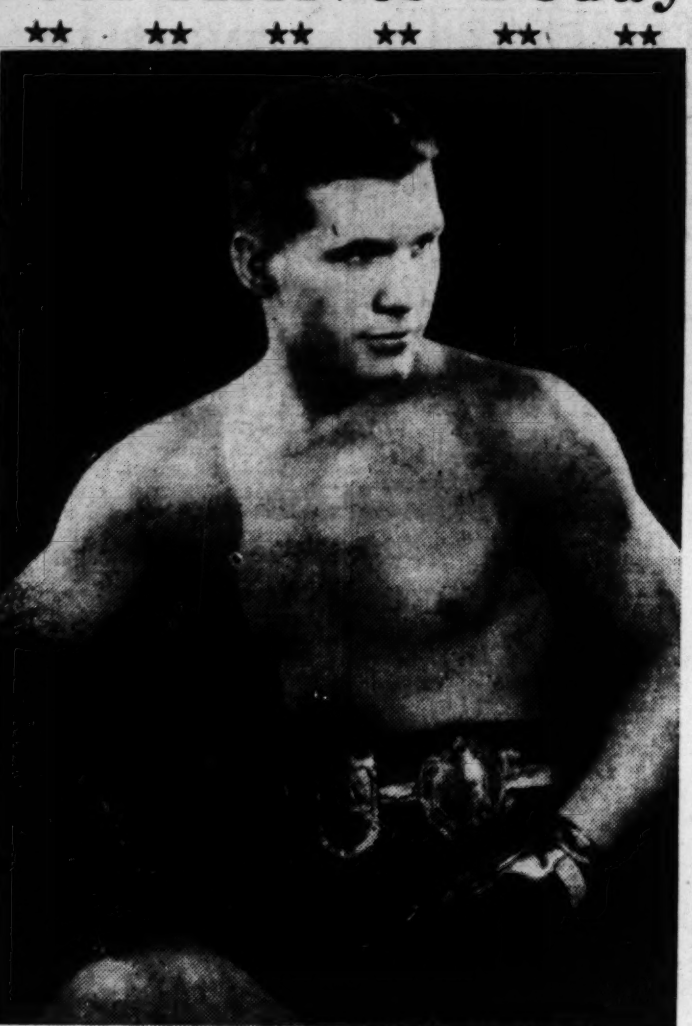

It will be a grim and determined Teddy Yarosz who arrives in Atlanta by plane this morning. The Pittsburgh boy, ranked No. 1 middleweight title contender in New York state, will fight Al Hostak, the champion, next month at Seattle for the title—if he gets Jack Dempsey's decision at the ball park Monday night.

Yarosz's arrival here, together with the announcement that he will be fighting for a crack at the title he won in 1934 and lost a year later, has sent interest in this fight, which already had attained unprecedented heights, to fever pitch.

The Ben Brown camp at Groover's lake was jubilant upon learning that Yarosz would be fighting for a title shot Monday night. "What the hell will Brown be fighting for, his health?" stormed Sam Sobel. "Maybe you think if Brown beats Yarosz for the second time in a row, he'll be Dempsey as third man—he won't be offered that fight with Hostak. There wouldn't be any way to keep him out of it."

"Remember," continued Sobel, "Ben has never lost a return fight. And he won't be starting now with so much at stake. We'll be gunning for a knockout every minute of the way. But if Yarosz tries to dog it, hold on and stay on his bicycle, we'll just have to accept the decision."

Ring Magazine, the leading publication of the boxing game, has just ranked Brown fifth among the middleweights of the world, basing their rankings on Ben's recent questionable decision over Yarosz, who was rated near the top of the light-heavyweights. Ted weighed 164 1-2 for his last fight with Brown. But he can make the middleweight limit when there is a reason. Brown will probably come in at 161 pounds for this most important test.

Jack Dempsey will arrive in Atlanta Sunday night at the airport. This is his first appearance as referee since his recent serious illness.

Officials announce the pass list is suspended for this boxing extravaganza.

At least 17,000 fans can be accommodated for a fight at Ponce de Leon park.

Florida will be blessed with two of the best passers and Cody probably will use an aerial attack far oftener than Pitt teams do.

The only senior regular returning is Clark Goff, who will hold down one tackle post, John Smith and Kelly Melmon, juniors, and Sophomores, Tony Clancy, Herbert Robson and Bill Whitehurst, are fighting for the starting position opposite Goff.

Mush Battista, a junior, is the leading guard candidate, but the

CODY TO DEPEND ON SOPHOMORES IN GRID SEASON

Three, Maybe Four, Sophs To Start in Backfield; Goff Only Veteran.

By JOHN WILDS.

WELAKA, Fla., Sept. 7.—(AP)—Sophomores will have to shoulder the load at the University of Florida, where the football team lacks enough experienced players to start a game—let alone finish it.

The success or failure of the team will depend on how well it can handle the Pittsburgh University style of play taught by two assistant coaches added to the staff since the 1938 Gator fiddled around wily in the season but finished with a bang.

Coach Josh Cody has given Harold Williams and Walter Milligan a free hand in teaching the hard-hitting style of game that gave Jock Sutherland national championships at Pitt.

But Cody is only too aware of the fact that his squad doesn't have the bulk, the speed or the adeptness of the players who helped make the Sutherland game a success.

INEXPERIENCED TEAM.

"We'll just have an inexperienced football team," Cody commented. "The boys are working their heads off and the coaches are doing their best, but there is no way of knowing what they can do in competition."

"There will be three, and maybe even four, sophomores starting in the backfield. A lot depends on them."

DIMAGGIO HITS 27TH; TED LYONS WINS TWELFTH

Indians Conquer Tigers; Ken Chase Hurls Five-Hitter at A's.

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS.

The world champion Yankees clicked again yesterday for a 5 to 2 conquest of the Boston Red Sox, inflating their margin over the challengers to 16 1-2 games.

Monte Pearson and Oral Hildebrand collaborated in a three-hit pitching job, which successfully strangled the Boston power attack, while Joe DiMaggio led New York's own 11th offensive with his 17th home run and a single.

Pearson shot a shutout by walking four batters in the fourth, forcing in one run and setting up another that scored on a double play. He was replaced at the start of the sixth after allowing only one hit and got credit for his 11th victory.

The Red Sox played without Ted Williams, their sensational rookie fielder, who bruised his left hand on the rightfield wall yesterday chasing a fly ball. Jake Powell, Lou Finney substituted and went hitless.

Kendall Chase's five-hit pitching and his mates' 16-hit assault won the Philadelphia pitchers gave the Athletics a 10-to-1 victory over the Athletics and Chase his 10th victory of the season.

The Senators blasted Nelson Potter off the mound in the third inning and continued their assault on Lester McCrabb, rookie up from Williamsport, Eastern league team. Taft Wright notched out four hits, including a home run with Sam West on base in the fourth inning.

Refusing to surrender fourth place to Detroit, Cleveland's Indians wallowed the Tigers for 16 hits and a 9 to 8 victory. Hal Trosky had four hits, including his 24th homer, off Hutchinson, Rowe and Thomas. Hank Greenberg got two homers.

The veteran Ted Lyons won his 12th victory as the Chicago White Sox put on a four-run storm in the ninth to defeat the Browns, 8 to 4, in the opener of a double-header. Johnny Rosenthal's homer set off the winning rally. Chicago also took the second game, 11 to 4. The Sox had lost a game in St. Louis this season.

sation who won three games during the meet, his last two starts being three and four hitters; Willie Sutton, who tamed the strong Post Office bluegum wilders once; Whitey Anderson, a fast ball right hander, and Lefty Moreland, a southpaw with a world of stuff.

All in all the Atlanta entry in amateur baseball's big annual party seems pretty well set to cope with the toughest amateur teams of these United States.

went through a stiff blocking drill while Coach Joe Dougherty of the backfield and his aspirants running signals and doing very little rough work.

The coaching staff seemed very little worried by the poor showing made Wednesday by the varsity players in a surprise scrimmage against the freshmen. ## NAGURSKI LOSES ONLY TWO BOUTS

Bronko Nagurski, the mighty heavyweight wrestling champion of the world, who risks his title against Henry Piers, 1928 Olympic champion from Holland, at Warren field Tuesday night, has the greatest record of any of the modern mat kings.

Nagurski, twice All-American fullback at Minnesota and recognized as the top professional line-buckler in the game for some seven years, has lost only two matches since he turned wrestler six years ago. One of those defeats was handed him by Strangler Lewis—the other by Jim Londos. Pictures of the London-Nagurski match, which was staged some months ago, are currently being shown at Atlanta arenas.

Nagurski, fast and unbelievably strong, won the undisputed crown from Louis Thesz before 10,000 fans at Houston two months ago. Thesz has been unable to wrestle since. He was severely injured.

Henry Piers is a formidable challenger for the title.
